A SHAM FIGHT

Done to Coddle the Irish Electors for the Benefit of the English.

Such Was the Action of Parliament in Reference to Evicted Tenants' Bill

LONDON, Aug 22—It is said that Mr. Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, has succeeded in calming the storm aroused by the Irish members as a result of the veto by the house of lords of the evicted tenants bill The angry threats made against the government by the Irish members during the all night session of the house of commons on Monday were heralded as the beginning of a bitter revolt upon their part. Thos Sexton, the anti Parnellite member for North Kerry, started the ball rolling at that time by asking what action the government would take in view of the house of lords veto. Sir William Harcourt said that this was the greatest question that can occupy the government's attention, adding, however, that it was inadvisable to make a statement on the subject at present. Mr. Sexton then asked if the government would define its policy in the next queen's speech. Again the liberal leader announced that the government was not prepared to make a statement as to its policy in this respect On conclusion of the committee of supply, the same evening a number of Irish members proposed various motions with a view of forcing Sir William Harcourt to make a definite announcement on the course the government would pursue on the house of lord' veto

The motions were all defeated in a house of only sixty members by majorities of about twenty and the commons adjourned at 4 a m. on Tuesday This revolt, it now appears, has been quietly neutralized by Mr. Morely, who had a long, persuasive conference with Mr. Sexton yesterday which induced an entirely different tone in the house of commons last evening The Irish members, it is known, accused the government with collusion with the conservatives to postpone the house of lord's veto. But Mr. Morley denied with emphasis that there was any such arrangement and Mr. Balfour made a similar denial on behalf of the conservatives. The incidents of Monday night were followed with threats from the Irish press. In this connection the Times today says: "Few people believe that it was more than a sham fight, done for the purpose of coddling the Irish electors into the belief that the Irish members are not the servile tools of the government"

AMERICAN LAWYERS.

Meeting of the National Association at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, N. Y, Aug 22 — The American Bar association, of which Judge Thomas M Cooley, of Ann Arbor, Mich., is president, began its seventeenth annual meeting here this morning The president being absent by reason of illness, his address was read by the acting president, Judge Samuel F Hunt, of Cincinnati. It was very lengthy and communicated the most noteworthy changes in statutory law on points of general interest which have been made in the several states and by congress during the preceeding year. The secretary, John Hinckley, of Baltimore Md, reported the membership as 1,112, and the election of sixty new members. Every state but Nevada and three out of the five territories are represented. The treasurer, Francis Rawle, of Philadelphia, reported the finances in a flourishing condition, and a comfortable balance in the bank. The executive committee submitted its report in the section on legal education. This afternoon the chairman's address was made by Henry Wade Rogers, president of the North Western university at Evanston, Ill. Papers were read by Judge John F. Dillon, of New York, on "The True Professional Idea," and by John D. Lawson, of the university of Missouri, at St. Louis, on "The Standard of Legal Education in the West"

TWO INDICTMENTS

Against a Fraud Who Was Operating in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The grand jury of Fairfax county, Va., has returned two indictments against Dr. Granby Stanton Howard Dr. Howard is the man who started what he called a new religious order on a basis which he claimed to have obtained while an officer in the British army in India Among those who embraced the new faith were Colonel Celsus Price, of St. Louis, son of the late General Sterling Price, members of the family of Joseph Specht, a St. Louis merchant, and Mrs. W. L. B. G. Allen, the authoress. Howard established what he styled a school of philosophy at Gunston hall, on the Potomac, the former home of the Masons of Virginia, now the country seat of the Spechts. He is said to be in Canada at the present time. The indictments charge him with obtaining from the Spechts $4,000 in money and diamonds which cost $1,300 Mr. Specht has been investigating Howard's career for sometime and asserts that he has operated in New York, Boston, Burlington, N. J; Newport, R. I.; St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, Chattanooga and other places under various names

STRUCK A ROCK.

A Steamer Goes to the Bottom of the Lake.

RAT PORTAGE, Ont., Aug. 22.—The steamer Monarch, 160 tons burden, struck a rock and went to the bottom August 19, at Long Sault, Rainy river, and fifty excursionists escaped on a rope. None were lost. The steamer was the largest on the lakes and was lost in fifty feet of water. News of the wreck was brought in by an excursionist, who returned last night

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The British Court of Inquiry Reports on the Kow Shing Case.

Japan Justified in Sinking the Ship—The Reported Battle Near Shanghai Not Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Aug 22—The Japanese legation has received no news of the engagement between the Japanese and Chinese forces reported from Shanghai in despatches published this morning The officials of the legation express the strongest confidence in the accuracy of the telegram received at the legation yesterday, announcing that the finding of the British naval court of inquiry at Shanghai in the Kow Shing case was favorable to Japan The statement concerning the action of the court, members of the legation state, was undoubtedly based on official information, as was also the additional statement that the British admiral had reported to his government that, in his opinion, the sinking of the Kow Shing was justifiable. The legation characterizes as unqualifiedly incorrect the assertion that the commander of the Naniwa ordered his men to fire upon the survivors from the Kow Shing, who were struggling in the water

TOKIO, Aug 22—It is officially announced that on June 30, the king of Corea declared himself independent of China and appealed to the Japanese to assist him in driving the Chinese from Asan. This, it is added, was done with the assistance of the Corean troops. The official announcement also says that on the same date, June 30, Corea denounced all treaties with China

GLASGOW, Aug. 22—The Japanese consul here has protested against the detention of the Steamer Islam, ordered by the earl of Kimberley, secretary of state for foreign affairs, under the provisions of the foreign enlistment act. The consul claims that the Islam, which is a fast vessel recently sold by D & W. Henderson to the Japanese government, was not intended to be used as a cruiser When the steamship was sold to Japan her name was changed to "Tosamaru," but at the outbreak of the war her name was again changed to Islam.

CRUMP FOR CONGRESS.

A. P. A. Candidate Victorious in the Republican Convention.

BAY CITY, Mich, Aug. 22.—Greatly to the surprise as well as disappointment of the leading republicans of Bay county, Rosseau O Crump, of West Bay City, was last night nominated for congress at the convention held in East Tawas. Ten formal ballots were taken without a majority for any of the seven candidates, Crump leading with 34 The first formal ballot gave him the nomination as follows: Crump, 40; Kelley, of Alpena, 1; French, of Ogemaw, 33; Hart, of Midland, 1. Crump has never been considered as anything above the ordinary business man, and in his old home at Pittsford, N. Y., where he was born, the people will laugh when they hear that he has been nominated for congress

Crump's main support in the convention came from American Protective association sources, and if Weadock is nominated by the democrats a religious warfare will be fought in the Tenth district which many will regret Crump is acknowledged to be a member of that association and Weadock's position with regard to it is well known to the entire country, as he endeavored to expose it on the floors of congress Crump will be opposed by such republicans as Carrington, Cooley and ex-Congressman Wheeler, who have already gone upon record as opposed to his nomination.

ALIX THE DAY'S STAR.

The Trotting Queen Covers the Course in 2:05 1-4 at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22—Alix yesterday trotted in 2:05¼, at Washington park, and the exhibition was pronounced by nearly all horsemen present to be the greatest ever made in a sulky. It reduced the track record of 2.05¼, held by Nancy Hanks, and while it fell a second and a quarter short of the world's record, it was really a better performance, conditions considered. Washington park is at least a second and a half slow. It has not been so fast as formerly since new loam was placed on it before the June running meeting, and it is in need of a good hard rain. All the drivers agree that the track is slow. John Kelly, who handled Directum last year, said: "This is the greatest mile ever trotted. Had Alix been sent against her record last week at Terre Haute she would have undoubtedly beaten it"

Cholera Deaths.

BERLIN, Aug. 22—For the week ending at noon on August 20 thirty-two new cases of cholera and twenty five deaths from that disease reported from different parts of the German empire.

Crispi All Right.

ROME, Aug 22—There is no truth in the report that Signor Crispi is dead; on the contrary, the premier is enjoying the best of health.

Evans Nominated.

Mrs. Ira White will leave today for Lima and Beaver Dam, Ohio, for a week's stay with friends.

WHAT IS A DUDE?

Grand Master Workman Sovereign Gives a Definition.

He Says a Dude Can Be Best Described as a Cross Between Nobody and Nothing.

BALTIMORE, Md, Aug 22—General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, addressed a large meeting of workingmen last night, in the course of which he said: "In the beginning, men started equally, but now the one class has nearly everything, and millions, though willing to work, are on the verge of starvation. While millions are starving the rich still find a place on earth for magnificent palaces and great parks, where they may hunt and enjoy life as they please to do In America today there are 3 000 000 men willing and ready to work who are idle for want of work to do—molding themselves, or rather being molded into felons and beggars. Charity has been strained as it was never strained before, but still the cry for bread from starving throats is heard all over the land. These men are being turned into tramps. The tramp has been described as a cross between poverty and crime, but I think that the dude, a product of our civilization, can just as accurately be described as a cross between nobody and nothing. Both are the results, the outcome of monopoly—the monopoly that, unless it is throttled, will cause the death of the republic"

MARRIAGE OF ELOPERS.

Best Man and Bride's Maid Moved to Follow Their Example.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Aug 22—Willard E Minor and Miss Annie Singleton, of Turner Station, Ky, eloped to this city yesterday afternoon and were married by Magistrate Keigwin. They were accompanied by Ashley F. Kelley, of New Castle, and Miss Cleo Skinner, of Turner Station, who acted as attendants at the wedding During the ceremony Kelley and Miss Skinner were seized with a mutual infatuation, coupled with a strong inclination to become one The only impediment in the way to their union was the fact that Miss Skinner had already promised her hand in marriage to a man residing at Turner Station, and the wedding was announced for tomorrow. Miss Skinner was in a dilemma. She averred that if she married the man from Turners she could never love him.

The question was thoroughly canvassed among themselves Miss Skinner decided to give up the man from Turners and marry Kelley. He at one time was her beau ideal, but on account of Miss Skinner's parents disliking him he was not permitted to enter the Skinner family. No trouble was experienced in getting the license, and the couple were united in wedlock, after which the quartet left for their homes The parties to the sudden marriage are members of Kentucky's first families

OPPOSE DEBS PROPOSITION.

Sargent and Arnold Say Brotherhoods Will Decline to Lose Identity.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind, Aug 22—There is no belief at the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen that a consolidated organization of railway labor will result from the Debs proposition Grand Master Sargent and Grand Secretary Arnold believe that the members of the brotherhoods will be more content than ever before to remain with the old line class organizations Mr Sargent will recommend in his report to the international convention at Harrisburg next month that lodges which forfeited membership be permitted to resume their places without the payment of the first fee. The brotherhood chiefs will also do what they can to secure positions for individual members who lost their jobs by joining in the American Railway union strike.

LIMA ALDERMEN ARE BALKED.

President Hughes Refuses to Put the Combine's Resolutions.

LIMA, Ohio, Aug. 22—The proceedings of the city council were marked with another row over the Hallwood paving contract and the "big nine" councilmen endeavored to get a resolution through that would have prevented any paving being done here for years President Hughes declined to entertain the motion and declared the council adjourned, and he with two members and the city clerk left the council chamber. Councilman Spellacy was then placed in the chair by the combine and the resolution was passed. Lawyers say it is illegal and will not hold.

WILL RECEIVE THEIR FORTUNES

California Judge Orders Large Sums Paid to Mrs. Fair's Daughters.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal, Aug. 22—Judge Colley, of the probate court, has ordered that the daughters of the late Mrs. Theresa Fair be awarded their portions of their mother's estate. The daughters are Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Miss Virginia Fair, of New York. They will receive $1,500,000 each. The distribution of the estate was opposed by their brother, Charles, because, under the terms of his mother's will, he cannot receive his share of the $500 000 until he is thirty years of age. He is now about twenty six.

LICENSES IN MARENGO.

Policy of Thirty Years is Overturned Through Pique.

MARENGO, Ill, Aug. 22—Marengo is in a fever of excitement over the action of the city council last night in granting saloon licenses at $1,200 per year. The town had been "dry" for thirty years and the present board had been no license by a tie vote. Liquor has been sold on the quiet, however, and yesterday the alderman who held the controlling vote was summoned by the law and order league to appear as a witness against I. E Barnes, who was being prosecuted for illegal selling. It irritated him so that he joined the license forces when a vote was taken last night The town went no license by a majority of eighty-five last spring and the court dockets are full of judgments and unpaid fines.

WEAVERS' STRIKE.

Indications Point to a Long and Bitter Fight.

The Howland Mills Rescind the Notice of Reduction of Wages—The Strikers Jubilant.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug 22—The strike situation has undergone no material change since yesterday. All the mills remain closed and both sides seem to be as determined as ever. Secretary Ross, of the Spinners' union, and Treasurer Howland are today having a conference, at which the date of the reopening of the Howland corporations will be determined. Mr Howland is being bitterly criticized by the other manufacturers. He is accused of unfair conduct, in as much as he was represented at the meeting of the treasurers by the agent of his mills, Byron Card, and has not carried out the agreement of that meeting Messrs. Howland and Card, in interviews today, answer these attacks. Mr Card states that Mr. Howland knew nothing of the meeting until long after it was over; that he (Card) attended it at the request of the treasurers, but he had no vote and that he agreed to post the notices of reduction, subject to Mr Howland's action on his return. The latter, on his return to the city on Monday, rescinded the notice The various unions held meetings today. At a mass meeting on the common today a speaker declared that the weavers had the right to go into every mill in the city and cut the cloth of their looms Mayor Brownell has called a conference of the manufacturers and operatives for tomorrow evening.

HORRIBLE DEATHS.

Two Men Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

LEMOURS, N. D, Aug. 22—The boiler of a threshing engine on a farm eight miles southeast of here, exploded this morning, instantly killing John Lind and Louis Berg The latter was blown 100 feet and frightfully mangled. Four men were more or less injured.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va, Aug 22—Chas Peyton, a switchman in the Chesapeake and Ohio yards, went between two cars to make a coupling today and met with a horrible death He did not see a bolt that had become loosened and projected so that it went entirely through his head suspending the body while the train moved two car lengths.

FAVORS THE SHIP CANAL.

Reports on the Proposed Connection of the Ohio River and the Lakes.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 22—The provisional committee appointed to devise ways and means for the construction of the Lake Erie ship canal between the Ohio river and the lakes, met here yesterday. Colonel T. P. Roberts, engineer of the Monongahela River Navigation company, asserted that the water supply tributary to the canal is four times greater than needed and can be reached at a cost of $600 000. The cost of the canal would not exceed $20,000,000 It would have have a capacity of 15,000,000 tons per annum, double the present tonnage of the railroads covering the same territory. John T. Shaw estimated that the commercial interests and population of the territory through which the canal would pass would double, and the railroads would really be beneficiaries of the improvement. An executive committee was appointed to prepare a statement for the public. The provisional committee will meet again September 4

CALLAHAN GUILTY.

Great Crowds Assembled to Learn the Mayor's Fate.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22—At 11.35 this morning there was a commotion in the court room by the announcement that the jury reached a verdict in the Callahan case. Deputy Boya came into court and saw Judge Moise, who at once ascended the bench and ordered the jury brought down. The accused was brought in and the different attorneys took their places Capt. James Buckley took his seat in the front row as foreman, and the jury was polled. Then a verdict of guilty was presented. There was an immense crowd in and around the building as the announcement was made, and the news spread with great rapidity. Callahan received the news stoically.

The crime for which John T. Callahan was convicted was demanding and receiving bribes while a member of the city council. The most important count was the demand made on Mr. Lyman Wydney, a coal dealer, who desired certain wharf privileges in order to successfully conduct his business. After several interviews with Callahan in regard to the matter, Mr Wydney paid the amount demanded, $500, and soon afterwards the council granted the privileges requested. There were several indictments against Callahan for similar offenses.

INDIANA

Telegrams From Different Parts of the State.

MIDDLETOWN, Ind, Aug. 22—The Irondale Tinplate works of this place will begin operations on the 1st of September, with a force of 130 employes This is the industry that was given a site and a cash bonus of $50 000 by Middleton people to locate a rolling mill, but the great depression in the iron industry induced the company to make the change The original contract also called for the employment of 400 men.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind, Aug 22—David Strabler was assaulted by "circus hobos" Monday night, beaten until unconscious and robbed of $200 The highwaymen are supposed to have gone to Watson, a station five miles north of here, where a gang of twenty five thieves are said to be rendezvousing Strabler's condition is such that he is unable to give a description of the men who robbed him.

FRANKLIN, Ind, Aug 22—Daniel Doty, charged with stabbing, with intent to kill John W. Turner, was bound over to the circuit court of this county yesterday morning. His bond was fixed at $3 000 His bondsmen are his father, John Doty, and J H. Gillespy. The cutting occurred a month ago, and the wound is still open. Doty is wealthy. Both men live near Providence, nine miles west of this city.

NEW PALESTINE, Ind, Aug. 22—The creamery plant at this place, owned by Wilkins & Strong, was totally destroyed by fire early yesterday morning The fire is supposed to have originated in the engine room, and when discovered was under such headway that it was beyond control. The actual loss is unknown; amount of insurance, $1,500.

BEDFORD, Ind, Aug 22—A little four-year-old son of August Schultz, in the north part of the city, was burned to death by his clothes catching fire from some matches with which he and other children were playing.

BEATTY, Ind., Aug 22—Samuel King, a farmer residing near Acton, was instantly killed by being run over by a south bound local freight on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

Young People's Societies Will Oppose it in Politics.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind, Aug. 22—A call is being circulated in the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and Baptist Young People societies and among other church people of the state, for a mass meeting, to be held in Indianapolis soon, of persons independent in politics, who propose to antagonize the influence of the saloon in politics and in favor of enforcement of the laws and good citizenship generally. The movement is being quietly pushed and the men at the head of it say they do not yet know what the extent of it will be. They say they hope for great results It is understood that an effort will be made to organize the independent voters throughout the state. The movement is the outgrowth of the "good citizenship" meetings held here last spring, when John G Woolley talked in favor of independence in political action. The men interested in the movement say it has already brought about desired results. They point to the renomination by acclamation of Joseph S Bailey for judge of the supreme court by the democrats as one thing the movement has accomplished They say the saloonkeepers of the state said Mr Bailey should not be renominated Persons who join the movement will be expected to vote for the best men, no matter what political ticket the candidates' names appear upon.

Splenitic Fever.

BUFFALO, N. Y, Aug. 22—A consignment of forty-eight beeves suffering from Texas, or splenitic fever, was received at the stock yards yesterday. They came from Kansas City When one of the cars was opened two car casses were found inside Post mortems showed the presence of the disease. The entire consignment was slaughtered and the carcasses sent to the rendering works.

ANOTHER ERROR

Found in the Recently Passed Tariff Bill.

No Provisions Made for the Expenses of Collecting Income Taxes and the Clause is a Dead Letter.

WASHINGTON, Aug 22—In addition to the long list of errors found in the Gorman tariff bill, the surprising discovery has been made by the treasury department officials that no appropriation has been made for putting into effect the income tax provisions. The collectors of internal revenue can do nothing under these circumstances in the direction of preparing to collect the tax. The treasury officials claim to be blameless, for they forwarded to the appropriations committee, more than a month ago, an estimate for an initial appropriation of $500,000 to be used during the current fiscal year in carrying out the income tax provisions of the tariff bill, if it should become a law The secretary of the treasury, through the commissioners of internal revenue, estimated that the appointment of 250 deputy collectors and 200 additional clerks in the Washington office would be necessary to begin the preliminary work.

Whether by accident or design neither the house nor the senate appropriation committee paid any attention to Secretary Carlisle's estimate and the internal revenue collectors are therefore helpless and must therefore defer all arrangements until congress provides the necessary money. This will not be done at the present session, as, owing to the lack of a quorum in either house, no business can be transacted except by unanimous consent, which, of course, can not be obtained for the purpose of saving the income tax law from disaster. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller admits that congress strangely failed to provide the necessary money, but is hopeful that when the two houses reassemble in December the amount of his estimate will be included in an urgent deficiency appropriation bill, so that the administration of the new law will be made possible.

There were just twenty one senators present today when the vice president called the senate to order. The deficiency bill was received from the house immediately after the chaplain's invocation, and having been signed by the speaker the vice president immediately attached his signature The absence of a quorum was immediately pointed out by Mr. Aldrich and only thirty two senators answered the roll-call, eleven less than a quorum. A consultation was immediately held among the democratic senators, Mr. Blackburn urging that the absentees might as well be sent for today as tomorrow. The decision of this impromptu caucus seemed to be in the same line, as Mr. Harris moved that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to request the presence of absent senators, which was agreed to. There was a long delay while the list of absentees was being made up for the sergeant-at-arms. One by one they reported, Mr. Blanchard making the thirty seventh.

At 1:40 p m. the senate adjourned.

Chairman Wilson has gone to West Virginia but will be back tomorrow at which time it is expected he will see President Cleveland and some intimation may be given as to when congress can wind up its business. The house was not in session today and very few members in appearance. Speaker Crisp was in his private room winding up work. He said he had no intimation as to the disposition of the tariff bill or the probability of adjournment.

SAYRES DENIES IT.

Representative Sayres, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, brands as false and sensational the story printed today to the effect that the startling discovery had been made that the appropriations committee had negligently or by design failed to allow the sum necessary to collect the income tax. "Every allowance for the collection of the tax has been made in accordance with the request of the treasury department," said Mr. Sayres. "The commissioner of internal revenue conferred with me last week on the subject and I asked him to talk with Secretary Carlisle and then submit a resolution covering just what he wanted. This was sent to me on Saturday. It called for an additional $9,000 for clerical help in the internal revenue bureau. I introduced the resolution on Monday last and it was passed It is just as the treasury department authorities want it"

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A Young Lady's Dress Set on Fire by a Locomotive Spark.

PITTSBURG, Pa, Aug 22—Miss Edith S. Clark, eighteen years old, daughter of a Pittsburg bank official, was walking near the Fort Wayne railroad at Chilton, when a spark from a locomotive set fire to her clothing. In a moment she was enveloped in flame. Crazed by fright and pain, she rushed across the track and sprang into the Ohio river, from which she was rescued with difficulty. She is in a very serious condition, but may recover.

FORT WAYNE'S PARKS

Just Now at the Height of Their Beauty.

The New Plans Here for the Beautifying of Swinney Park—Improvements This Summer.

Through the kindness of Thomas DeVilbiss, member of the board of public works, a SENTINEL representative was last evening given an inspection of the city parks—five in number.

Fort Wayne has about eighty acres which are given over to park purposes Some of them are merely breathing places, and Swinney park is yet to be beautified artificially, but for a city of this size eighty acres for park purposes is not a bad showing

Just now the parks are in the height of their beauty. They require the attention of seven men under the charge of Superintendent Doswell, who in turn is responsible to the board of public works Our parks never looking better, and it is a wonder that more people do not take advantage of them Beautiful flowers, lush green grass, flashing fountains and inviting seats in shady nooks ought surely tempt more people on hot days than they really do.

The North Side park was first visited Here is where the board has been expending some of its limited means the past summer The North Side park contains about fifteen acres and has a most promising future It has a six years' start, and bids fair to be one of our most attractive spots The total amount of available cash for park improvements this summer was $900 and only a part of this sum could be used. What improvements that were made, however, shows that the money was wisely expended

Two permanent improvements have been made at the North Side park this season. One is an artificial drinking mound and the other is an artificial pond at the northeastern corner. The mound, or rockery is the conception of Mr. DeVilbiss and it is a work of beauty and twice as ornamental as an iron fountain It consists of a great pile of boulders from the center of which comes a gurgling spring—the water shooting out in a dozen different places and falling into a basin on the east side. The overflow goes to swell the tiny lake a short distance to the east This will next season be filled with lilies. Such a thing may be that the waterworks trustees will build a dam in Spy Run creek just below the bridge leading to Spy Run avenue. If this is done it will make an excellent bathing place and add greatly to the beauty of the park.

The next places visited were the Old Fort and Hayden parks The former has some very pretty flower designs, one of which reads, "Old Fort, 1794-1894,"—a mute appeal, by the way, for a centennial celebration worthy of the occasion. Hayden park contains about one acre, and, entirely surrounded by dwellings, adds greatly to the value of property in its locality It looks green and fresh despite the long dry spell

The most ornamental park in the city is the McCulloch park on Broadway. Once an old cemetery it outlived its usefulness in that direction and is now justly admired by those who even merely glance at it as they go by on the cars. Mr. Doswell has shown his ability here as a floral designer, as the many highly ornamental designs attest.

The greatest possibilities await the development of Swinney park—which is really a park now and contains sixty acres peculiarly fitted for this use. A winding river, giant forest trees and gentle grassy slopes all go to make up an attractive place even now. The plans for beautifying the park arrived yesterday evening from Chicago, where they were made by Landscape Gardner Lindroth, who laid out Lincoln park. The plans are now on exhibition at the office of the board of public works. The estimated cost will be from $25,000 to $30,000

The main entrance has been made at Washington boulevard, and at the base of the elevation on the eastern side of the park is a triangular plot in which to locate a monument The road then diverges, taking in the old race course, and the center of that field is to be occupied by a lake. In the center of the lake is to be erected a music pavilion, to the west of the lake, in the southwest part of the park, are located lawn tennis, base ball grounds, etc. The present timbered part of the ground is devoted to a picnic ground, and a channel is to be cut through the ground, making a cut off in the river and furnishing a pretty effect. The portion of the park devoted especially to landscape gardening is located at the southeast quarter of the grounds, and ample provision has been made for it. A greenhouse will be located in the low, sheltered ground in this locality.

STARTED AGAIN.

New Life Put Into the Centennial Celebration Project.

A Committee of Twenty-five Representative Citizens Appointed to Devise Ways and Means.

The people of Fort Wayne are not going to let the long-talked-of centennial celebration go by default This is evident from the action taken last evening at a mass meeting of citizens held in the circuit court room.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Oakley and Col R S Robertson was made chairman The colonel reviewed the causes which had led to the resignation of the board of directors and said that the directory and the people were equally anxious for a celebration and that it would be a lasting shame and disgrace for the city to let the event go by unobserved Smaller towns had been holding appropriate celebrations and Fort Wayne could and ought to do the same, as far more historic interest was attached to this point

A I Friend was in favor of the citizens giving the city and county officials an indemnity bond, guaranteeing them against the loss of any funds advanced

Mr. Moynihan moved that a committee of twenty-five citizens be selected by the chair to devise ways and means of holding the celebration. He felt certain that the legislature would legalize the use of any funds appropriated by either city or county. Mr. Moynihan's motion was carried.

Capt. A. H. Dougall spoke upon the necessity of prompt action as the time was nearly at hand. He also spoke of the success of the Defiance and other celebrations

Peter Kindt moved that the old directory be appointed by the meeting and requested to carry forward the work they have already commenced, and the motion was unanimously adopted. The directory is composed of the following persons Mayor C. B. Oakley, president; Hons R S Robertson, J. B White, Charles F. Muhler, Charles McCulloch, J. F. W. Meyer, A. H. Dougall, secretary.

Colonel Robertson then announced the following committee of twenty-five provided for, as follows

A. J. Moynihan, N. R Leonard, W. D. Page, E. A. K Hackett, John Mohr, jr., G. W. Pixley, J. H. Bass, J. W. White, C. S. Bash, H. C. Paul, C. E. Everett, J. C. Peters, Louis Fox, S. C. Lumbard, Henry G Olds, H. C Berghoff, E. C. Rurode, J. D Sarnighausen, C D. Bond, A Hattersley, M. Frank, H. C. Graffe, D. N. Foster, J. B Reuss, S. F. Bowser.

The committe is requested to meet with the directory at the Aveline house parlors, Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

UNDER THE WHEELS.

A Wabash Freight Train Runs Over William Maxfield.

He Was Attempting to Climb Into an Open Box Car—Lying Very Low at the Hospital.

A sad accident happened at 9:30 o'clock this morning, about 100 feet west of Fairfield avenue, on the Wabash railroad. William Maxfield, an eighteen-year old lad, whose home is in Huntington, fell under a freight train and was probably fatally injured.

The young man was in company with a number of boys of about the same age and all of them attempted to board an out-going freight and steal a ride to Huntington. William tried to climb into an open empty box car and some way lost his hold and fell Both legs went under the wheels and were run over. A companion pulled the unfortunate boy from under the train and he was tenderly carried to the side of the track, where Dr. Enslen and others helped to bind up the wound. The right leg was run over at the ankle and the left leg between the knee and hip. The members were fearfully crushed and the boy suffered terribly. He was taken to the Hope hospital, where Drs. Porter and Schrader attended.

The physicians concluded not to make any amputation this morning, as the boy was very low from the shock. They will try to save the left leg, but the right one will have to come off just below the knee

The boy was well dressed and his parents are well to do and highly respected. The accident is particularly sad.

It happened that the boy's mother was in this city visiting relatives by the name of Staub, on High street, and she was immediately notified. The boy's father is a turner by trade and works for Capt F. F. Boltz in the Huntington wheel works.

SMALLPOX SCARE.

The Board of Health Will Hold a Special Meeting Today.

The board of health will hold a meeting this afternoon and probably quarantine the Goshen gravel road A lady from Noble county reported fifteen cases of smallpox at Churubusco, but this is undoubtedly a fake. There is one suspicious case in that place, however, and it is fully quarantined.

Is Now Assured.

The meeting of citizens held at the circuit court rooms last night to discuss the matter of celebrating the centennial anniversary of the building of the old fort, which was the beginning of the city's history, resulted in the appointment of a committee to devise ways and means for its proper celebration. The proceedings of this meeting are given in detail in our local columns and from them it will be seen that the celebration is now an assured fact. The arrangements were placed in the hands of a committee of citizens and they will formulate plans for the raising of the money necessary to give us a celebration worthy of the city and the events which it will commemorate.

THE SENTINEL has repeatedly urged the importance of the proper celebration of this event and the necessity that all citizens should join in the effort to make it a success. Aside from this duty which we are under to honor the pioneer heroes who paved the way for the civilization and the benefits which we are today enjoying, is the fact that its celebration would be of great material benefit to our city, for it would bring to Fort Wayne thousands of people from all the surrounding cities and towns. Let the centennial celebration be pushed vigorously and let it be made a great occasion. The people are heartily in favor of it and will join and uphold the committee in any action they may take in the matter.

Era of Record Breaking.

The racing queen, Alix, has broken another record, and this time it was one that Nancy Hanks made over the same track on September 23, 1893 Her mile of 2:06½ was the mark for the handsome mare to aim at, and well she did her part, for, at Chicago yesterday, in the Washington Park races she covered the mile course in the remarkable time of 2:05¼.

The time is not so far past but that it is within easy reach of personal recollection when the trotting record of 2:17¼ was regarded as phenomenal. Now there is an almost endless number of horses in that class, and a 2:17¼ mark these halcyon days would hardly excite enthusiasm at a pumpkin show.

There is a score of trotters on the American turf, any one of which can make the mile in 2:10 or better without a skip, and there is at least one (Nancy Hanks) with a record of 2:04. That is about the speed of an ordinary express train. Many experts are of many minds regarding the limit of endurance of trotters.

Mr. Robert Bonner, who has made a life-time study of horses, contends that a record of two minutes will be made, but is of the opinion that the time can never be made less than that because it is an absolutely physical impossibility. Still, if it is possible to knock off four more seconds from the present record, there is apparently no reason why it should not be lowered to 1:59. But there must be an end of it somewhere, and it is difficult to arrive at any other conclusion than that the end is already very near at hand.

Signs of Good Times.

Two of the most pronounced protectionist papers in the country are the Bulletin, of the Iron and Steel association, and the Wool and Cotton Reporter. It is interesting to observe what they think of the business situation.

The Bulletin says: "This is a great country, with boundless resources and wonderful opportunities, and now that the tariff question is settled and congress is about ready to adjourn, it is not reasonable to suppose that these hard times can continue much longer without amelioration. Prices can not advance to the old figures of a few years ago, labor can not receive its old wages; but the demand for all products must now increase, there is plenty of money money to pay for them, and with this increased demand must come better times for capital and labor."

The Reporter says: "It would be profitless to conjecture and unwise to predict, even were there a clearly tangible basis for prophecy, what the effect will be upon manufacturing interests, but the well known conservatism, business sagacity and enterprise of the manufacturers afford good ground for the hope that they will have adapted themselves to the situation as they find it before the new schedules become operative. In the meantime there is the fact of the vast consuming power of the country, the probability of an increased demand which has been long latent, the comparatively small stock of raw material in sight and the strong probability that every pound of it will be needed before another clip."

If these two protectionist organs see some light in the situation with a new tariff bill in the books, truly the sky must be rosy to other eyes. Indeed, indeed, "this is a great country, with boundless resources and wonderful opportunities"—a workingman's country that can't be kept down.

The Income Tax.

The income tax provision in the tariff bill begins to operate on January 1, 1895, and continues until January 1, 1900. The tax (2 per cent.) is to be levied on all incomes above $4 000 It is to be paid not only by all who reside within the country, on incomes derived from any source, but by citizens of the United States residing abroad, and by all residents of foreign countries on incomes derived from property situated in the United States or from business carried on here. The tax is on the income of the year previous to that for which it is levied. Therefore the first tax will be levied on incomes received in 1894.

There are two classes of incomes recognized by the bill—the incomes of individuals and the incomes of corporations. The taxable income of a corporation is all its income above its operating expenses, including the sums paid to shareholders. The tax of 2 per cent. is paid by the corporation. Therefore that part of an individual's income which is derived from dividends on the shares of a corporation that has paid the tax is deducted, on his return, from his own taxable income.

There are exemptions allowed by the bill in computing an individual's income besides the $4 000. They are as follows: The necessary expenses of conducting a business, all interest paid or due within the year, local taxes, losses in trade or from fires, storms or shipwrecks, not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, worthless debts, and income on which the tax has been paid by corporations.

As to corporations, charitable, religious and educational corporations are exempted, as are states, counties and municipalities, building and loan associations, savings banks having no stockholders, receiving no more than $1,000 in a year from any one depositor, and dividing all the yearly profits among the depositors except a contribution to a 10 per cent. surplus. Mutual companies, including insurance companies, are all exempt.

Every person having an income of $3,500 must report it to the collector of internal revenue for his district, or his deputy. Salaries received from corporations are reported by the corporations to the collector of the recipient's district. The tax on the salaries of officials of the United States is to be deducted by the paymaster.

The collector may require a return to be verified by oath. The collector or his deputy may increase the amount of income reported if "he has reason to believe that the same is underestimated." If there is a neglect or refusal to make a return, or if a return is fraudulent, the collector or his deputy shall himself make a list, by examination of the person taxed, or other evidence. A 50 per cent. penalty is to be charged for neglect or refusal, and 100 per cent. penalty for fraud.

A person may declare that he has not $4,000 of income liable to be assessed or that he has paid his income tax elsewhere. If the collector or deputy is convinced that the declaration is true he may grant an exemption. If a return is increased by the collector or deputy the person taxed may offer proof that the increase is unjust, but the officer will not be obliged to take the facts shown as conclusive, and it is within his discretion to refuse relief. An appeal from his decision may be taken to the commissioner of internal revenue.

If a corporation does not file its statement a fine of $1,000 is to be levied on it, and 2 per cent a month is to be charged on the amount of tax due until it is paid.

The tax is payable on July 1 in each year. If it is not paid within ten days after that a penalty of 5 per cent. is to be charged, together with interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per month.

Chin, Not Cheek.

A whimsical artist on the New York World has been making pictures of great men with and without their chins. In place of the lower part of the face as it actually is he substitutes a weak jaw with as little chin as can possibly be put there without taking it all away. The result is striking. Washington, Lincoln and Gladstone without their chins would look utterly insignificant—almost like idiots Rosa Bonheur has a particularly square, determined lower jaw. When the chin that used to be considered the feminine model of beauty is attached to her face, the result is something indescribable. The chin rules the world.

When a person is all jaw and no brains, he is a great, forceful brute, without conscience or remorse, taking his nearest way to whatever his animal desires call for. Of a photograph of Peter Jackson, the negro prizefighter, a sporting man said: "Look at that jaw. That's where Peter gets his sand, and no man has more." In truth, it is where all people get their sand, statesmen and prizefighters alike. If you want a person with vim and endurance to carry through great enterprises, select always the one with the strong, square chin. The man will not retreat any more than his chin does. If you yourself have not a good chin, cultivate one by sticking to your word when once it is passed and by resolutely accomplishing what ever you undertake.

A sour old bachelor takes a fiendish delight in calling attention to the fact that there is one thing women cannot do anyhow, and that is tie their masculine cravats. "They may wear 'em," he says, "but they can't tie 'em. I've seen vests on 'em," he continued, warming up, "that in 10 minutes would drive a man into imbecility if he had to wear the like of them."

EL-ASKRI.

Soldier, when I beheld you go
In conscious and apparent pride
Through crowded streets, 'mid women's woe,
Glory your mistress, Death your bride—

Soldier, as as I beheld you pass,
You raised the trumpet, toss'd your head,
And, with your wild fervor, through the brass
The rally from your lips was sped.

Oh, then such rapture shook my blood,
Of pride and anguish, love and fear,
As never maiden understood,
Except she held a soldier dear.

And from that hour I live bereft
Of all in life that once was mine.
For by that blast my heart was cleft.
But, soldier, both the halves are thine!
—George Douglas in London Academy.

AN APPOINTMENT.

A man in bachelor chambers, an open letter in his hand, an amused expression on his face, with a suspicion of gratified vanity and a vague hint of indulgent contempt.

This was the letter:

"Probably you have forgotten me. I was but one among the many you danced with at the S. ball a week ago I know that you did not hear my name To me that dance was an event—an era. Of course I am transgressing the ordinary rules of society in writing this, but I have a feeling that you ought to know it. I would like to speak to you once more. Then perhaps you would not think too hard of what I have done. I shall be at Regent's circus, at the northeast corner, the day after tomorrow, at 4 o'clock. I shall wear a pink rose at my throat."

Certainly this was very advanced. There was some excuse for the smile of gratified vanity and half contemptuous indulgence on the young man's handsome face He tried for a few moments to recall any one among the half dozen strangers to whom he had been introduced at the S. ball likely to commit herself, but failed.

Then he hastily wrote a reply, for it was growing late, and he had more than one engagement that evening:

"I am deeply interested. Certainly I will be at the place you mention and at the hour. It seems that you know me and require no mark of recognition, but I shall wear a buttonhole of mignonette."

As he folded the letter it occurred to him that he might be the subject of a hoax, but the half timid words had the ring of truth, and he dismissed the idea. He addressed the envelope, as directed to, a circulating library where letters were received.

* * * * * * *

A girl, sitting in a morning room, just 44 hours later—a very pretty girl, young and innocent looking, too, but one of whom might be predicted divergence from beaten tracks.

The result of the first serious divergence lay before her in the shape of the young man's letter addressed to Miss M., and she was regarding it with somewhat rueful countenance.

That she had made preparations to carry out her part of the programme was apparent from the perfect bloom of La France languishing in a specimen glass beside the letter. The room was in a house in M—— square, and there was still an hour and a half before her presence would be required at the particular corner in Regent street. She had no cause to fear any difficulty in keeping her appointment.

The door opened, and a second girl entered—tall, fair, aristocratic. The first was fair also, but her hair was irrepressible and fell over her forehead and round her ears in uncurbed waves and curls; that of the newcomer was drawn tightly back and twisted into a smooth knot behind, on a well shaped head.

"Oh, Edytha, you darling, how sweet of you to come this afternoon!"

The gray gowned girl jumped up and threw her arms around her friend's neck. She was impulsive in all her actions.

"I haven't long to stay, Kittie—just half an hour I must go down Oxford street to do some shopping. Can't you come?"

Kittie hesitated. Her letter was in her pocket.

"No, Ida," she said slowly, "not this afternoon. I—I have a toothache. I don't think I shall go out."

"Poor little girl! Can I do anything for you? I wish you would come, though, Kittie. I have to get a bonnet."

"A bonnet? Where are you going—Mme. Teresa's?"

"No; Favart's, I think. I saw one in her window that I rather liked."

A sudden inspiration came into Kittie's pretty head. She leaned forward. The sparkle came back to her gray eyes, the curves to the corners of her mouth.

"Oh, Dytha, why don't you go to Mme. Mathilde's? I like her style so much better. At any rate, you might try. And, now I think of it, I will come, but I must call at Mrs. Bond's first. Papa told me not to forget. I will meet you outside Mme. Mathilde's at 4 o'clock."

"Oh, will you? That's a darling Kittie! Then I needn't have Jane, and we'll go to Fuller's for tea."

When Edith arose five minutes afterward to bid a temporary farewell to Kittie, the latter took the La France from her glass.

"What an exquisite rose, Kittie! Who gave it to you?"

"No one. I am just going to put it in your dress. You want just a touch of color."

* * * * * * *

Four o'clock and Edytha Vansittart stood outside Mme. Mathilde's looking for Kittie, the pink rose still in her pale blue gown, nestling among the black lace at her throat, and no Kittie came

Some one else came, half stopping, stared a moment, passed and came back—a strikingly handsome man, well dressed, with a modest buttonhole of mignonette.

He hesitated and paused, because it was difficult to reconcile the letter from Miss M. with the aristocratic, haughty figure in the doorway of Mme Mathilde's bonnet shop He came back, because the incidents were too complete for mistake. They were there, time, place, flower and the lady herself, evidently looking for some one. He lifted his hat. It was strange she had not seen him, or, at any rate, his buttonhole.

"I am glad," he said softly, "that you have not disappointed me. I have lived in a state of expectancy since I received your note."

The young lady in the doorway brought back her eyes from their voyage in search of renegade Kittie and stared at him indignantly

"I think you make a mistake," she said coldly.

He drew a step backward. There was no mistaking the tone. He still kept his hat in his hand.

"I beg your pardon. How can that be? Did you not mention the hour, the place"—

"I say again you make a mistake. If you persist, I must call for assistance. I—I am waiting for a friend."

What did it all mean? Involuntarily his hand clasped the lapel of his coat just below the mignonette.

Seeing that he still stared and did not move, she retreated indignantly into the shop, half crying:

"Oh, that false Kittie!"

Kittie meanwhile was still sitting alone in the morning room in M—— square. She was wondering how her plan had progressed, whether the young man with the mignonette in his buttonhole had indeed been there, and if he had taken any notice of Edytha.

She would certainly hear the whole story. Edytha was so correct and staid, she would be dreadfully indignant Would she, Kittie, ever see the hero of her first dream again? Now that she had lost her chance she was half sorry and half inclined to wish she had taken it.

* * * * * * *

It was at a morning concert that Edytha Vansittart again met Dick Willoughby.

He had, in fact, gone there with a friend who happened to know Miss Vansittart slightly in the express hope of seeing her and gaining an introduction, and he succeeded. Kittie was sitting in the stall behind, but Dick never noticed her. He was entirely occupied by his desire to repair to Miss Vansittart his unfortunate mistake.

He saw that she was completely innocent of any design in wearing the pink rose. He did not care to explain the hidden meaning of the strange coincidence, partly on account of the weakness of his own ultra credulity, partly from a sense of honor toward his unknown correspondent. He still thought it possible that the letter might be genuine.

If, on the other hand, he had been tricked, it was safer to pose before Miss Vansittart as a villain than a victim. Therefore he strove to make his peace by humble avowal of folly and abject promises of amendment. She had taught him a lesson, he said

Three weeks later Edytha Vansittart came into the morning room of the house in M—— square with the news of her engagement She was very content and prosperous and happy, very reasonably fond of her Dick.

Dick Willoughby was rich, and Edytha was already planning her trousseau. She was to have a few gowns from Worth.

Edytha was married at the end of the season, and Kittie was one of the bridesmaids.

* * * * * * *

It was at a villa at Arcachon that she met Dick Willoughby again. She had been ordered abroad for the winter, and Dick and his wife, lingering south on their bridal journey, came there to see her.

Kittie lay by the open window, her face smaller, more childlike than of old, her eyes larger. Dick Willoughby sat by her side. Edytha had gone into the town. They were leaving Arcachon on the morrow, and she had some purchases to make.

"You will come back quite strong for next season, Kittie."

The girl was silent. Then, turning her eyes upon him, patient and full of tears, "You have been very good to me, Dick, and I want to tell you that I don't think I shall come back again."

"I have done nothing for you, child." There was a huskiness in the man's throat.

He went away from her side for a moment, moving restlessly about the room On the davenport lay a letter directed in Kittie's handwriting to her father She wrote few letters now Her correspondence with Edytha had been carried on lately through the friend who acted as her chaperon and nurse.

Dick stared at the envelope, then went back to the sofa, excited, eager, expectant.

"Kittie," he said, looking at her steadily, "tell me, were you at a ball at S. last spring? I had fancied all along that I had known you somewhere before."

There was no answer. A little, thin hand crept up to shield her eyes, her face.

The man knelt down by her side and drew the hand away.

"Darling, tell me, was it you who should have worn the pink rose?"

It was a mere breathless whisper. Still there was no answer. The red blood waved right up to the soft ruffled hair, but she would not lift her eyes.

"Oh, my love, my little love, why have I known you late?" His voice broke almost to a sob.

* * * * * * *

Kittie never spent another season in town. When the spring came, there was a newly made grave in the English quarter of the cemetery at Arcachon marked by a white cross and planted with La France roses. The doctors said that she had inherited consumptive tendencies, which no care would check.—Sala's Journal.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

Harry Reed's life had been spent for the most part in his mother's sickroom. He had cared for her as a daughter would have done and many an hour he had spent reading stories to the chronic invalid. He was egotistical and romantic and at 18 thought himself a very old young man. When Mrs. Reed, at last awakening to a sense of her selfishness in keeping him constantly at her side, sent him on a western trip for a change, the active life and scenes about him were novel to his inexperienced eyes. So little had his time and thoughts been his own that he was now like a child thrown for the first time dependent upon the world.

While at Socorro, N. M., he was wandering around when he passed the convent. Some young girls were starting for a walk, following two white capped, black robed nuns. Very discreet and demure the scholars looked, hardly daring to lift their eyes toward the handsome young man staring at them with respectful admiration and curiosity. Yet one pair of eyes glanced into his, and in youth one look is enough. This one who most attracted his attention was a tall girl with black hair and eyes. Her face was clear and colorless except her lips, which were scarlet. Her greatest attraction was her graceful manner and a charming air she had of distinction and dignity. Harry decided she was the most beautiful girl he had ever seen and called her, in his thoughts, the Spanish princess. He haunted the convent and was rewarded once by sight of her at an open window. He lifted his hat, and she did not look displeased, although she discreetly closed the blind, but this may have been because the priest was just then entering the gate.

Harry went home and planned a skillful disguise—that of an elderly Mexican selling wares out of a basket. With the aid of a stick he limped along and went by the convent. As luck would have it, the young lady he so admired was in the yard. With girlish curiosity she leaned over the fence to glance at the articles in the old vender's basket. One of "the sisters," standing at the window, looked at the scene, but she evidently thought there was no harm in an elderly Mexican. Meanwhile Harry did not wait for any preliminaries or another opportunity, but with the ardor of the young poured out the whole story of his sudden affection. In romantic youth, who would not be captivated by such flattering devotion? The sister was coming toward them, but the young girl managed to give her name—Florita Sanchez—and to murmur in perfect English: "I will be home next month at San Antonio. Look for the large adobe house, with porch all around, up on the hill"

Harry walked away so full of blissful dreams that he fell right into the arms of a constable coming to arrest him. The town had been troubled for some time by petty thefts and more serious burglaries. The police were watching zealously, and this constable, whose home was in the vicinity of Harry's boarding house, had his own suspicious views of a young man who entered a house dressed like a gentleman and afterward appeared as a poor old Mexican peddler. So he escorted the young fellow before a justice of the peace. The trial given Harry afterward caused him great uneasiness. He saw that he was regarded with suspicion, and he viewed with alarm the crowd of wild, rough looking fellows gathered in the adobe room where court was held. He had heard enough about the primitive and expeditious methods of frontier justice to believe that his life was in danger.

He had begged to have his own clothes brought from the boarding house, and, having changed, removing also his wig and false beard, felt more like himself. When called to the stand, he asked to be allowed to tell his story. With many blushes, it must be confessed, yet with great candor, he explained the situation to the satisfaction of the justice. "All the world loves a lover." The threatening faces of the crowd became friendly and smiling. The court adjourned with a laugh as the justice, a portly, good natured man, slapped Harry on the back and cried out: "Well, you're released. I wish you success. Go in and win by all means, old boy." The story created great amusement in the town, but it did not pass the convent walls, where Florita thought of him, and with uneasy compunctions of Senor Rodriquez, another lover, whose ranch adjoined her father's at San Antonio.

Harry soon journeyed toward the town, where he expected to meet again the Mexican beauty. He obtained a room at a small hotel. A few white people were in business in the place, but for the most part the villagers were Mexicans. Their adobe houses and walled in gardens were very curious to him. Every yard was gay with flowers, and there was a general appearance of thrift and independence not always seen in similar settlements. The dark eyed senoras, all in black, with their grave rebozos carelessly thrown over their heads, walked slowly along under the trees. He regarded them with new respect. Some of them might be Florita's relatives. The men were mainly conspicuous by their broad brimmed, tall crowned hats. One day he passed the girl's home and saw her father. The old senor's height and fierceness of aspect were of a sort to strike terror to a timid heart, but the senora was very gentle and motherly looking.

The next evening Florita arrived, one of the sisters having brought her home. In a day or two Harry went to the house and made a call. He was charmed, he said, with the senor's garden. Might he go into it and look around more closely? The senor was pleased to unlock the little gate and show his vegetables, vines and fruit trees After that Harry made many calls and was received with great ceremony in a wide, cool hall ornamented with a piano and guitar, on which Florita was supposed to show the accomplishments gained at the convent; also a frequent visitor here was Senor Rodriguez, who seemed a great friend of the family.

Harry never had an opportunity to speak to Florita alone, but with the optimism of youth he believed that she accepted his affection and he could afford to wait. In confident happiness he wrote to his mother all about it, receiving in reply a torrent of abuse, coupled with the command to return home at once "Your western trip must have turned your brain. You send us pages about a Mexican girl who, I suppose, goes barefooted and wears a ring in her nose," wrote the indignant lady, who was apt to become confused in her ideas by excitement. Of course Harry did not go back. He had been plentifully supplied with money, and he determined to remain as long as that held out, at any rate.

To add to his trouble, the old senor, apparently suspecting his intentions, began to treat him with cold politeness, while Rodriguez plainly indicated by his looks his desire to knife the white man to the heart on some dark night. So our young American traveler had on hand all the love and misery possible to one youthful heart He was only hardened the more in his determination by this opposition from all sources and drew from it some evidence that Florita loved him in return. In this he was mistaken, for after the novelty of their first acquaintance had worn off she no longer thought of him as a lover and was making other preparations for her future This did not prevent her remaining polite and kind to her youthful adorer, while her father and the unsuspecting Rodriguez saw in the American's continued unexplained presence in their town only an impertinent curiosity which they resented.

In the week after Harry's arrival he noticed watchfires burning near Mexican homes at nights, for the great yearly event was at hand which celebrated the religion of the Penitentes, that old superstitions belief and practice which the priests are continually endeavoring to stamp out. All the members of this order wear a pale blue cross tattooed on the forehead, and Harry had noticed this emblem on the face of Florita's father On a far hillside there was a deserted adobe house, where the Penitentes underwent their self imposed torture. On the night of the ceremony Harry determined to see this performance, which is supposed to be private and secret. He had discovered a large crack in the adobe wall through which he could look into the interior, and in the dark he stationed himself there on the evening of the event. It gave him some comfort to remember that Florita must have, because of her convent training, no sympathy with these old superstitions of her race.

A great fire of pinon burned in one corner of the room and lighted it up, showing the half naked figures of the members of the order kneeling in silent prayer. At last they arose, and seizing bunches of the cactus piled near began to beat their arms and breasts with the thorny branches. Blood flowed from the wounds as the needlelike points pierced their flesh. Sometimes one, in the fierce ardor of his religious zeal, would strike himself with such force that he would fall fainting and bleeding and have to be carried out to be restored to consciousness and receive medical treatment for his injuries. Occasionally from some poor wretch remaining would escape a groan which even his Spartan spirit could not control. As the fire was replenished the flames would leap up, throwing a white light upon the awful tableau in that room of penance, showing the never to be forgotten sight of those dark, fanatical faces, the bared arms and breasts with blood streaming from self inflicted wounds

For awhile Harry looked upon the sickening vision with breathless and excited fascination. He marveled at the fierce zeal that could produce a scene shocking as this. He still continued to gaze until the room was in shadow, and his illusion of love seemed to fade with the dying fire. He could stand no longer the sight of so much pain and torment as these men trifled with death. Half fainting, as if he had been scourged himself, and pale as a ghost, he returned to town thinking: "What an escape I have had! These Mexicans are merely savages. I could never endure Florita's father and hardly the girl herself after the scene tonight."

In the early morning he took the train homeward. He arrived at night, and the glare of the electric light revealing familiar things was to him the light of civilization. Only this was real, and he had returned to it unchanged. Yet a dream of a girl's dark eyes and lovely presence in a picturesque little Mexican town upon the Rio Grande rose like a living picture before his eyes, but it was quickly blotted out by another vision that seemed like a scene out of the dark ages—that blood stained room of penance with the hideous and useless sacrifice of superstition. Only this could justify, he thought, his brutal act in leaving behind, as he honestly imagined he had, a maiden's broken heart. —Francita Trujello in Philadelphia Times.

Chinese Literary Conservatism.

"The secret of the survival of oriental customs and alleged civilization is to be found in the peculiar literature of the Chinese and other people of eastern Asia," remarked D. J. Maitland of London, who has resided on several occasions in Hong-Kong and in Tonquin. "Originality is never attempted by a Chinese author. Since I learned the Chinese language I have amused myself at various times in reading the standard works of the Celestial Empire and have felt very much like the old lady to whom a dictionary was loaned, and who, after patiently reading several pages in succession, remarked that it was highly instructive, but somewhat monotonous. The country abounds with classical quotations, and when a man proceeds to write he leads off with a half a dozen of these on general principles. Then he approaches the actual excuse for taking up a pen, only to leave it frequently to ring in 20, 30 or 40 lines about some great man who died 3,000 or 4,000 years ago, but who, strange to say, is able to comment on an event which has just taken place. Thus it is that a student of Chinese frequently has to wade patiently through a mass of words before he ascertains the information he is seeking. This extraordinary reverence for authorities and antiquities is the real cause for the extreme length of Chinese plays I have never sat through a complete play, but I have followed one for two or three nights in succession and have been astounded at the ability displayed by the author to weave around the most ordinary plot a mass of philosophy calculated to delight the worshipers of ancient Chinese civilization and to drive the white man to something infinitely worse than drink."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Hand Made.

A Glasgow man during a business trip had the misfortune accidentally to burst one of his shoes. Entering the first shoemaker's shop he saw in order to purchase a new pair, he asked the son of Saint Crispin if he had any hand sewed shoes in stock.

"I lenty o' them," replied the tradesman, and after taking the customer's measure he went into an inner apartment and soon returned with an armful of footwear

The gentleman selected a pair that fitted him best, and examining them with a critical eye remarked

"You're sure these shoes are hand sewed?"

"Look here, my friend," exclaimed the indignant shopman, "ye sharply lima think that I made thae shoon wi' my feet?"

Left $300 to Her Dog.

There is a little dog named Bobby, a Skye terrier, in New York, that should feel extremely happy, and very probably there are many people in the great metropolis and elsewhere who would like to swap places, but of course not forms, with that dog. Bobby, by the will of his mistress, Mrs. Kunegunda Kugler, is left $300 during his lifetime. Of course he hasn't got the money himself, for dogs can't use money; but it is held in trust for him. The will says nothing about his heirs, so probably he trustees will use the balance after Bobby's death. There are a good many people who would hasten the end.

I Wonder Why

So many women will continue to suffer when help is so near.

It is queer. They avoid society and are reluctant to make the least effort.

Further investigation discloses irregularity of periods, dizziness, faintness, accompanied by a crushing sense of bearing down and perhaps leucorrhœa. Yet they would like to be well.

Oh! why don't they believe:—

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most marvelous cure for all this trouble. Thousands of American women are living testimonials of this great truth.

A purely vegetable remedy.

Charles Klepper, a carpenter in the Pennsylvania car shops, had the fleshy part of his right hip badly crushed under a heavy piece of timber yesterday. He was removed to his home, 92 Oliver street, where Dr. George Stemen attended him.

Carpenters' union No. 153 will hold a meeting in A. O. U. W. hall, on Court street, next Saturday evening, to make arrangements for Labor day celebration. The union would be pleased to have every carpenter in the city present Saturday night.

Wabash Plaindealer: "The son of the veteran Conductor Godfrey, who for years ran a passenger train on the main line of the Wabash, and who fell and broke his leg one winter night on the station platform in this city, is now agent, operator and tower man at Newton Junction. After the accident his father had to have his injured leg amputated."

George Fox, a brakeman on the Nickel Plate railroad, had his arm crushed at Burr Oak, Ind., last night. He was brought to this city and taken to his home, No. 100 Greeley street, where he is attended by Dr. James M. Dinnen, the company's chief surgeon.

A recently prepared statement which appeared on Wall street is to the effect that in the last eighteen months 43,000 miles of railroads of this country have been placed under protection of the courts. This is an amount equal to 24 per cent. of the total length of roads in this country.

The old Shufeldt distillery at Chicago closed today, owing to the depression in whisky. Several hundred men are thus thrown out of employment It would appear, from the closing of this distillery, that the large body of bibbers who have so untiringly labored for many years in putting down whisky have finally succeeded.

J. C. Talmage, a son of the late General Manager Talmage, of the Wabash railroad, who died in his private car in Peru some years ago, is now a freight brakeman on the Wabash, running between Peru and Montpelier. Mr. Talmage has been in Denver, Col., and came here Saturday. He had scarcely made the application for a position when he was sent out on the road.

THE SENTINEL unintentionally omitted reference to the Nickel Plate's Niagara Falls excursion, which left here last Monday afternoon and which was the largest excursion party to the falls that was ever gotten up in northern Indiana. The trains started from Valparaiso, in four sections, and when they passed through this city they were fairly well filled. The trip, by way of the Nickel Plate, is a most delightful one, and those who "took it in" will say so when they return.

Captain C. Hettler, the purchasing agent for the Pennsylvania company, is busy nowadays buying lumber for the new cars which are to be built in the Pittsburg shops at this point and of which mention was made in these columns yesterday. The east car shops have a capacity of eight cars per day, but in ordinary times the out-put is usually limited to six cars. The dairy produce cars require more labor and material than any other kind of freight cars and the shops have thirty of these to build, besides the 100 box and 100 furniture cars.

Dr. J. H. Barnfield has tendered his resignation as medical examiner of the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief association, at this point, to take effect September 1, or as soon thereafter as the company has secured some physician to fill the place. Dr. Barnfield will return to Logansport to engage in the practice of medicine and surgery, having formed a partnership with a well known and long established physician of that city. Dr. Barnfield came here to succeed Dr. J. M. Kella, December 1, 1893. He is well up in his profession, is a very social gentleman and his departure from Fort Wayne will be greatly regretted. His successor has not yet been named.

Wabash trainmen coming down from Toledo this morning say that it is reported in that city that ex-Trainmaster C. F. Sisler is lying in a precarious condition at the Boody house in that city. He was stricken with paralysis last night. Mr. Sisler, since his retirement from the position of trainmaster, has been making a tour of the lakes and was soon to take a passenger run on the road. He is well known in this city and the news of his misfortune will be received with sorrow by his many friends.

A. W. Swanitz, a consulting engineer of prominence, has written a letter to the Journal of Commerce in which he says the railways must very soon begin to buy rails in large quantities. Eleven years is the life of a steel rail, he says, and after that time it must be removed. According to the inter-state commerce commission report, there are about cineteen million tons of steel rails in use in the United States, all of which must be renewed every eleven years. This means 1,727,272 tons per annum on an average. Mr. Swanitz says that renewals have contributed largely to reduction of expenses, and that the time has come when contracts for new rails must be made. They cannot he longer postponed with safety.

This afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, funeral services were held over the remains of the late General Passenger Agent France Chandler, of the Wabash, at St. Louis. Immediately after the services the remains were placed on a special train and started for Romeo, Mich., where interment will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Nearly all of the officials of the Wabash attended the funeral. Romeo is a small station on the Grand Trunk railway, about thirty miles north of Detroit. The funeral train will come over the main line as far as Peru, where it will take the Eel River route to Detroit and thence the Grand Trunk to Romeo. District Passenger Agent R. G. Thompson went to St. Louis last night to attend the funeral.

A BAD SHOWING.

The receivers of the Union Pacific have issued their report on the earnings of the Union Pacific and its connecting lines for the month of June. STATE NEWS.

Peter Crum, a farmer near Muncie, has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. The liabilities are $2,500, with assests much less.

John Marone, of Vincennes, while driving across the railroad tracks was struck by a train and terribly injured. Both of his horses were killed.

Lightning set fire to Judge John Pitchell's large barn, near Santa Fe, causing $4,000 loss. Two valuable horses were cremated, with much farm property.

The Rev. C. S. Parker, of the United Brethren church of Frankfort, has resigned his pastorate to complete a theological course at the North Manchester Institute.

The late Dr. William Strange, of Frankfort, for over forty years was a practicing physician in Clinton county. He was born in the county in 1829 In 1872 he served in the legislature.

Bellmore reports a hail storm which covered the ground with hail, some of the stones as large as a hen egg. Great damage was done to fruit trees and vegitation generally. Chickens are even reported as having been killed, the same as if shot to death by bullets.

The systematic robbery of freight cars loaded with wheat at Seymour led to the railway detectives taking the matter in hand, and the arrest of a number of small boys, all of whom were committed for trial on confessions of guilt. The storage and sale of several hundred bushels of wheat was traced.

Charles Cowmas, a Big Four brakeman, while switching cars at Terre Haute, was alarmed by the cries of Alexander Skarkus, of Fontanet, who attempted to climb between the cars and was caught by the bumpers. Cowmas signaled the engineer to release Skarkus, and while recoupling the cars was himself caught and dragged to his death. His home was at Lafayette.

Isaac Fought and Richard Amom, of Clinton, had trouble at one of the mines, in which Fought was the aggressor. Afterwards they met on the streets of Clinton, Fought armed with two revolvers, with which he began shooting. He fired six shots, only one of which struck Amom, passing through his ear. City Marshal Bachelder then armed himself with a double-barreled shot gun, and through its influence Fought was locked up.

A snow-white apparition near Frankton first made its appearance to the affrighted vision of McClelland Beagle, of Indianapolis, a track walker in the employ of the Manufacturers' Natural Gas company, and it also floated into view when Beagle was accompanied by James Haggarty. Even the horse which they were driving was alarmed. They watched the apparition until it made the circuit of John Riley's residence and then disappeared in mid air.

To Cleanse the System

Eureka!

Mr. Thomas Batie, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence" 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.

For many years past it has been the aim of scientific chemists and physicians to produce a medical preparation which would be not only immediately beneficial in relieving various forms of headaches, but extremely pleasant and palatable to take. This result has been successfully arrived at by the Arnold Chemical Company, of Chicago, who have perfected by a continued series of careful experiments an effervescent compound known as Arnold's Bromo-Celery. This remedy not only contains those salts which act so marvellously on the nervous system, circulation and digestive organs, but also the active principle of Celery, so excellent in its effects upon the blood, brains and nerves.

All those who are afflicted with headaches due to stomach disorders, bilious ness, sluggish liver, torpid bowels, constipation, sleeplessness, brain exhaustion, nervous depression, mental excitement, late hours, alcoholic excesses, or other irregularities, are recommended to try Arnold's Bromo-Celery. They will return again and again to this excellent restorative and class it as one of the finest remedial agents of modern times.

The World's Tribute to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893.

World's Fair Medal and Diploma

awarded to

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

ACCORDING to Lancaster, an American ornithologist, frigate birds can fly seven days without lighting and without great fatigue They eat and sleep on the wing, flying seeming almost to be an involuntary action, like breathing. The albatross is nearly as strong, but is commonly obliged to alight after four or five days in the air.

S. M. ANDREE, a Swedish scientist, has collected tabular information showing the weight of peas in their pods. The lightest peas are always found near the ends of the pod. The average weight of a pea was greater the larger the number of peas in the pod so that the largest pods contained the heaviest peas. The weight of the peas next the point of the pod increased with the increased number of peas in the pod. With the exception of the first and last peas, there was but a small difference in the weight of the peas in the same pod.

A FAMOUS HORSE.

Eclipse, Whose Performances Have Been Unsurpassed.

One of the most celebrated of English race horses was Eclipse, who has been dwelt upon as the king of horses by every historian who has written of thoroughbreds since his time.

Eclipse came into the world amid darkness in daytime, for he was foaled during the great eclipse of the sun in 1764. From this incident he took his name, and not, as is sometimes said, because he eclipsed all rivals. The Duke of Cumberland bred Eclipse, and he surely never expected such a wonder to result from the union of Marsk, a race horse of the most ordinary capacity, who in eight years in one stud had produced no horse of note, and Spiletta, a mare who had been deemed but little worthy, having run in but one race, in which she was defeated.

The Duke of Cumberland died in 1765 when Eclipse was a yearling, and at the sale of the nobleman's stud both sire and son went under the hammer. Marsk went into the hands of a Dorsetshire farmer for a trifling sum and was held for service at the small charge of half a guinea. A Smithfield salesman, by name William Wildman, who had a penchant for thoroughbreds, learned through a groom of the deceased Duke that Eclipse was a colt of more than ordinary promise, so he went to the sale and bought him for 75 guineas He showed so well for his new owner when put in training that Mr. Wildman immediately bought out his sire, Marsk, and paid 20 guineas for him to the farmer, who seemed highly pleased to be relieved of a bad bargain

When Eclipse by his unparalleled performances made Marsk famous Lord Abingdon paid 1,000 guineas for the latter, and he earned many thousands of guineas for his owner. Eclipse was so unmanageable that he was not trained as a 3-year-old, and was no better at 4, but when 5 years old was given a course of preparation. Capt. O'Kelly had purchased a half interest in him for 650 guineas, and when the colt started in his maiden race managed to bet a lot of money on him at long odds. From that race it was "Eclipse first and the rest nowhere." He was on the turf two seasons, and, starting in twenty-four races, was never beaten. He won eleven kings' plates, most of them with 168 pounds up, a record of one more than had at that time ever been won by one horse He was a roarer from a colt, and could be heard at a great distance when racing, but it seemed not to operate as an impediment to his success and he imparted the disease to only a few of his get.

Capt. O'Kelly obtained complete ownership of Eclipse by paying Mr. Wildman 1,100 guineas for the second half, and afterward, when asked to put a price on him, named 25,000 as his figure. Capt. O'Kelly realized £6,000 from Eclipse's services on the turf, and as he earned something like £50,0 0 in stud, he was an exceedingly profitable horse for the captain, who realized a sum equivalent to about $350,0 0 from him. He died in 1789, having sired 334 winners of $510,235, besides whips, cup, plate and forfeits.

Eclipse's courage and speed were always noticeable. He was ridden in all his races by only two jockeys, and only once did either of them ever draw a whip on him.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Priceless Treasures Brought to Light in Egyptian Ruins.

The most remarkable discovery perhaps ever made among the tombs of ancient Egypt is that brought to light recently by M. de Morgan, a young French archæologist of note. It includes pyramids, tombs, etc., of remarkable workmanship and also a splendid collection of jewels, who e intrinsic value is estimated at about $600,000.

Among the objects there is a bouquet of lotus flowers, with the stalks interlaced, and which from a purely artistic standpoint ranks foremost in attractiveness. On the other hand, there are three what the curious ears call pierced cloisonne plates that are absolutely invaluable from their historic associations. They are set with lapis-lazuli, blue and green translucent enamel and huge exquisitely colored turquoises. The figures in these be jeweled ornaments represent hawks crowned with royal crowns, Egyptian deities of manifold form as well as figures that evidently are meant to represent priests in their sacrificial robes.

Among the unique articles dug up are also some ingeniously designed contrivances in the shape of brooches for measuring the water level in the Nile. Sacred beetles cut in amethysts and, covered with gold plates are numerous, as are also chains of large beads of the same stone. On some of the golden articles may be found splendidly modeled lions, lion claws and shells beaten out or chiseled in the massive gold. Experts who have had an opportunity to see and judge for themselves say that no modern goldsmiths can ever attain such perfection as that of the old Egyptian artists in the imitation of objects from nature. Here are also a varied assortment of vases and small cups cut in jasper and alabaster and a vast array of rings of curious shapes.

The most amazing of all is that, barring the bronze and silver mirrors, which have become more or less corroded, the remainder of the jewels look as bright and glistening as if they had just come out of the artisans' hands, and yet M. de Morgan estimates that these treasures were buried more than 3,000 years before the birth of Christ.

Wool from Rabbits.

In parts of France a species of rabbit is utilized for the wool, which is said to be softer and finer than that of sheep It is obtained at intervals by combing the animals.

COVERED HEAD & NECK

Eczema of Worst Type. School and Society Abandoned. Felt Death Would be Relief. Cuticura Soon Put An End to all Sufferings.

Ever since I was three years old I have been troubled with Eczema of the worst type. It at times completely covered my head and neck. I have tried all sort of medicines, and have been doctored by many very eminent physicians, but with no favorable result. Sometimes my head was one mass of thick scab that would run and bleed, and in summer would be much worse; my eyes looked as though they would fall out. I could not go to school or mingle with society, as the disease smelt so bad. I felt at times that death would be a relief, suffering and itching until I hardly knew what to do. I got your CUTICURA REMEDIES the 28th of January, and used them according to directions, and can now say that the disease has entirely left me. Words can never tell my thanks to you and your valuable medicine, and I shall always recommend them to whoever I see suffering from the terrible disease I had spent money and tried the best of doctors with but little relief.

MISS HANNAH WARREN,
1437 George Street, La Crosse, Wis.

WAS IN CONSTANT AGONY

I have suffered from a severe attack of what is called Prurigo. The disease produced an intense burning and itching sensation that kept me in constant agony all the while, so that I got but little rest day or night. CUTICURA cured me entirely in a few weeks. I cheerfully recommend it for like troubles

Of Interest to Mothers.

The success of Miss Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25c and 50c bottles for sale by druggists.

Size of Pages 16x11¼ inches. Number pages, Over 830. Pages in each part 32 Price of each part only 10 cents. Number of pictures over 1000 and all of the history besides.

Three coupons of different dates and 10 cents secures each part.

May 18, 1849.

To The Editor:

Volume No. 5 of Harper War Book just came, and it surprised me greatly to find the large colored map. Accept thanks for your promptness. I thought the other parts couldn't be beat, but they seem to grow better. If others appreciate the value of what you are giving for only 10 cents, you must sell a host of them, for if anybody once sees these War Volumes they must be as much surprised as I have been at so much, and so good, for such a low price. You deserve a vote of thanks for what you are doing. The good done by placing this great Harper history of the civil war in reach of every man, woman and child cannot be calculated.

Yours very truly,

INDIANS RESTLESS.

Comanches and Kiowas Troublesome Over Money Matters.

They Slaughter Cattle and Make Life a Burden to the Cowboys and Cattlemen.

EL RENO, O. T., Aug. 22—Reliable information has reached here that the Kiowa and Comanche Indians are becoming alarmingly troublesome because the money to the amount of $60,00 due them by cattle men for lease of their country has not been paid them. It has been due them for several months and they are unable to get a dollar As a result the Indians are assuming a war-like attitude toward the cattlemen and in some sections the disturbing element has destroyed range fences and slaughtered cattle. Serious trouble has also come about by reason of individual demands by certain members of these tribes for their share of back pay. There is much uneasiness among the cattle men and neighboring settlers.

WAIVED EXAMINATION.

Arthur McLean Committed to Jail on the Charge of Murder.

CONCORD, Conn., Aug. 22.—Arthur McLean, charged with the murder of Miss Nettie Douglass, at Henniker, with whom he went riding on the night of August 14, today waived examination, pleaded not guilty, and was committed without bail. McLean still maintains his nerve and was not a bit daunted by the crowd that packed the court room almost to suffocation.

THE COURTS.

Hotly Contested Case on Trial Before Justice Hays.

A Replevin Suit Before Justice Wilkinson—Cases Begun in the Higher Courts.

Justice Hays has been listening today to a pretty hardly fought law suit in which the prosecuting attorney appears for the state and Captain Harry Dickman for the defense. The case is that of the state against Maggie Nolan, who was arrested last night for keeping a house of ill fame. Captain Dickman is making a vigorous defense for his client and says that if beaten before the justice he will appeal the case to the circuit court

The replevin case of Della and William Bishop against Lou Johnson for the possession of a cow, the particulars of which were given a few days ago in THE SENTINEL in writing up a criminal case between the parties, was on trial this morning before Justice Wilkinson, but before being finished was continued, by agreement, until one day next week.

Hugh McLetchie and Elizabeth Smith have been licensed to wed

Charles I Badisc, administrator of the estate of Stephen Waters, has filed a petition to sell the estate of the deceased. J. B Harper is attorney for the administrator.

At midnight, Constable Skelly raided the Saratoga and arrested three men and three women They appeared before Justice Hays and put up bail for their appearance at 9 o'clock this morning, when they paid their fines.

Thomas W. Ferguson has brought suit against Mrs Ann Seavey and others for damages, asking for $3,000 His attorneys are B F. Harper and Colerick & France. The plaintiff was hurt in an elevator accident in the Searey hardware store July 2, and the claim is set up that the company knew of the bad condition of the elevator.

David Braden sues Joseph Wenck and Rudolph Krull, the livery stable owners, for $500 damages. Their drivers, Bernard Krull and Joseph Hausbach, were racing on Broadway with their horses and carriages on July 25 last, and caused a team of horses driven by the plaintiff to run away, smash his wagon, tear his harness and throw him violently to the ground. A. A. Chapin is his attorney.

FORT WAYNE RACES.

Greatest Race Meeting Ever Held in Indiana.

Robert J, 2:04 1-4; Alix, 2:05 1-4; Flying Fib, 2:04 1-4; Joe Patchen, 2:06, and Ryland T., 2:07 3-4, Among the Entries.

The races at Fort Wayne next week, Aug. 27th to Sept. 1st, inclusive, will undoubtedly be the greatest meeting ever held in northern Indiana. On Wednesday the program includes the two-year-old pace, with the greatest colt in the world entered, Directly, 2:12; the 2:10 pace, with sixteen entries; the 2:16 trot, with twenty-three entries, and the 2.13 trot, with fourteen entries. Sensational time will be made in all of these races. On Thursday the Driving club gives $7,000 in purses and stakes, including the free-for-all pace, with eight horses entered, all with records better than 2.09. On Friday the greatest two light harness horses in the world will appear: Robert J, 2.04¼, in an exhibition against the world's record, and Alix, 2.05¼, in the free-for-all trot. A new electric car line has been built directly to the grand stand, where passengers will be landed from any part of the city for five cents. Excursion rates on all railroads

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Fort Wayne People as Spoken of By Other Papers.

The Indianapolis Journal says. "Mrs. Mayhew and daughter and Miss Bessie McCracken, of Fort Wayne, who have been the guests of Mrs G W. Warner and family and Mrs C P Greene's family, returned home yesterday."

The Peru Journal says. "Miss Belle Strope, formerly trimmer at Miss Hallie Davis' millinery store, was in the city today on her way from Indianapolis to Fort Wayne"

The Lima, Ohio, Times-Democrat says: "Mrs. W. B. Lamborn and children, of Fort Wayne, Ind, are visiting her parents, Mr and Mrs Richard Ody, of St John's avenue"

The Huntington Democrat says: "Jacob Lindloch and family, of Fort Wayne, who have been the guests of the Herzog families since Saturday, returned home Monday night—J. F. Curlice and F. V. Culverston, of Fort Wayne, were in the city today on business."

The Huntington Herald says: "Miss Georgiana Ford gave a delightful tea last evening in honor of Miss Nellie Bash, of Toledo, Miss Nellie Eby, of Elkhart, and Miss Nina Strock, of Fort Wayne.—John Hartman, of Fort Wayne, who has been visiting the family of Pat McCartney, on State street, went to Peru this morning for a further visit"

The Decatur Democrat says. "Mrs. R. C. Cole, of Fort Wayne, is in the city, the guest of her parents—Miss Rosa Gass left for Fort Wayne today—Miss Maggie Dorwin returned to Fort Wayne this afternoon—Master Leo Martin returned from Fort Wayne this afternoon—Miss Nora Rehnen returned to her home at Fort Wayne today—Miss Anna DeWald, of Fort Wayne, is the guest of Miss Mollie Closs and Lena Burthell—Miss Mollie Fox, of Fort Wayne, is visiting in the city, the guest of Miss Maggie Smith."

ON A BRONCO.

A Newspaper Man Making a Long Tour to the City.

Everett McNeal, representing the American Press association, arrived in the city last evening. He is a newspaper man in search of material for articles which he writes for the American Press association and will have something to say about Fort Wayne and her early history. He started from his home in Wisconsin on the 2d of July last, riding a broncho, and will make the journey in this manner to New York city. He will leave this evening on his way east

RUNAWAY LOCATED.

C. S. Armstrong Sends a Telegram to His Wife.

C S. Armstrong, the young and foolish husband who yesterday shamefully deserted his wife at the Randall hotel, has evidently grown repentant. He has been heard from at South Chicago and is evidently ashamed of himself. This morning a dispatch was received from Armstrong at South Chicago which read as follows:

"If Mrs C S. Armstrong is still there, please tell her to wait I will send her money by wire, if I can"

The dispatch was unnecessary, as the young lady had gone home. She turned over her watch to the hotel last evening and left by the Lake Erie and Western road for her home. Before she left she told a policeman that her husband's jealousy was caused by a boarder at her father's home, and that there was absolutely no occasion for it.

This noon Dr. Gassell, the father of the young wife, arrived in the city on a hunt for the runaway husband. He will make things "warm" for the young fellow if he catches him. The girl will be sent to boarding school and a divorce will probably follow.

TWO BAD EYES

At police court this morning J. D. Bickford was arrested for putting two black eyes on the person of one Dave Brown. The fight occurred yesterday afternoon, and Officer Hardendorf made the arrest Brown was fined $1 costs, and Bickford's case was taken under advisement by Mayor Oakley.

WITHOUT A LICENSE.

For some time past a saloonkeeper named Seiling has been selling liquor without a city license, on Pioneer avenue, at the extreme south eastern limit of the city. The fellow kept a "first and last chance" place, and the mayor recently notified him to take out a license. This he did not do, and as a result he was this morning placed under arrest. Upon taking out a license and having it dated from last January, the case against him was dismissed.

GOT HIS WHEEL.

A few days ago L A Randall, of the Randall Cycle company, was notified by a young man named Ed Sisterhen, of Lagrange, to look out for a stolen bicycle supposed to have been ridden here. The wheel was described as being a Sterling make, and a good machine. A day or so later Mr Randall saw a well known young man riding the same wheel about the streets. Investigation disclosed the fact that the wheel had been ridden here and sold to a pawn broker and by him sold to the aforesaid young man for $50. The wheel was recovered and sent back to Lagrange.

Mr Randall has the reports of nine different wheels stolen in the northern part of the state within the past few weeks.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY

Conclusive Evidence of the Plottings of Anarchists.

America, Germany, France and England Have Anarchists Who Communicate With Each Other.

BERLIN, Aug 22—It is stated that among the belongings of the fourteen anarchits who were arrested in this city on the 15th inst were a number of documents which show conclusively that the Berlin plotters were in constant communication with their brethren in Paris, Barcelona, Chicago and London. Evidence was also found that financial aid had been received from the anarchists in the cities named by their companions in Berlin. Anonymous letters threatening Emperor William's life are frequently received at the imperial palace, and all possible precautions have been adopted to prevent the carrying of the threats into execution.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Strike Commissioners Hear Some of Pullman's Men Talk.

"Rents are Not Too High in That Suburb," Says Frank Glover, a Real Estate Dealer.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22—Several of the witnesses examined by the strike commission today gave testimony more favorable to the Pullman company than that which had previously been heard. Frank W Glover, a real estate agent, said he considered the Pullman houses, at $18 and $20 a month, really cheaper than $12 a month houses in surrounding towns. The Pullman houses were well equipped and beautifully located, he said, and rents were not, in his opinion, too high In reply to a querry of Commissioner Wright, Mr. Glover denied that he was in any way connected with the Pullman company.

Paul E Herms, a newsdealer who formerly worked in Pullman shops, said he did not place much faith in the complaints of the men. Their trouble, he thought, was largely due to a fondness for beer. All the saloonkeepers in the surrounding towns had grown rich, Mr. Herms declared, and a large number of Kensington beer wagons were well supported by the Pullman employes Of real estate values he knew little, but did not believe that Pullman rents were unusually high. T. H. Johnson, a Pullman furniture dealer, testified that store rents in the town had been cut, though no reduction had been made in the residence rentals.

CHICAGO, Aug 22—Further proceedings in the quo-warranto case affecting the Pullman company's charter which were to have been begun today, were continued owing to the absence from the city of Attorney General Maloney. It is probable that no further action will be taken for several weeks. The Pullman strikers and their families were greatly encouraged today, the visit of Governor Altgeld to their homes having led them to believe that they will receive immediate aid. The relief headquarters, which have been closed for a week, were re-opened today in expectation of returns from the governor's proclamation and a few supplies were received.

Governor Altgeld returned to Springfield last night, leaving the strikers in the dark as to his future plans for their relief. A committee from the board of county commissioners visited Pullman today and investigated the condition of the families with a view to voting money for their relief Geo. M. Pullman flatly refused to be interviewed regarding Governor Altgeld's visit and declared he would not discuss the strike in any of its phases.

A SHAM FIGHT

Done to Coddle the Irish Electors for the Benefit of the English.

Such Was the Action of Parliament in Reference to Evicted Tenants' Bill

LONDON, Aug 22.—It is said that Mr. Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, has succeeded in calming the storm aroused by the Irish members as a result of the veto by the house of lords of the evicted tenants bill. The angry threats made against the government by the Irish members during the all night session of the house of commons on Monday was heralded as the beginning of a bitter revolt upon their part. Thos. Sexton, the anti Parnellite member for North Kerry, started the ball rolling at that time by asking what action the government would take in view of the house of lords veto. Sir William Harcourt said that this was the greatest question that can occupy the government's attention, adding, however, that it was inadvisable to make a statement on the subject at present. Mr. Sexton then asked if the government would define its policy in the next queen's speech. Again the liberal leader announced that the government was not prepared to make a statement as to its policy in this respect. On conclusion of the committee of supply, the same evening a number of Irish members proposed various motions with a view of forcing Sir William Harcourt to make a definite announcement on the course the government would pursue on the house of lords' veto.

The motions were all defeated in a house of only sixty members by majorities of about twenty and the commons adjourned at 4 a. m. on Tuesday. This revolt, it now appears, has been quietly neutralized by Mr. Morely, who had a long, persuasive conference with Mr. Sexton yesterday which induced an entirely different tone in the house of commons last evening. The Irish members, it is known, accused the government with collusion with the conservatives to postpone the house of lord's veto. But Mr. Morley denied with emphasis that there was any such arrangement and Mr. Balfour made a similar denial on behalf of the conservatives. The incidents of Monday night were followed with threats from the Irish press. In this connection the Times today says: "Few people believe that it was more than a sham fight, done for the purpose of coddling the Irish electors into the belief that the Irish members are not the servile tools of the government."

AMERICAN LAWYERS.

Meeting of the National Association at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug 23 — The American Bar association, of which Judge Thomas M. Cooley, of Ann Arbor, Mich., is president, began its seventeenth annual meeting here this morning. The president being absent by reason of illness, his address was read by the acting president, Judge Samuel F. Hunt, of Cincinnati. It was very lengthy and communicated the most noteworthy changes in statutory law on points of general interest which have been made in the several states and by congress during the preceeding year. The secretary, John Hinckley, of Baltimore Md., reported the membership as 1,113, and the election of sixty new members. Every state but Nevada and three out of the five territories are represented. The treasurer, Francis Hawie, of Philadelphia, reported the finances in a flourishing condition, and a comfortable balance in the bank. The executive committee submitted its report in the section on legal education. This afternoon the chairman's address was made by Henry Wade Rogers, president of the North Western university at Evanston, Ill. Papers were read by Judge John F. Dillon, of New York, on "The True Professional Idea," and by John D. Lawson, of the university of Missouri, at St. Louis, on "The Standard of Legal Education in the West."

TWO INDICTMENTS

Against a Fraud Who Was Operating in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The grand jury of Fairfax county, Va., has returned two indictments against Dr. Granby Stanton Howard. Dr. Howard is the man who started what he called a new religious order on a basis which he claimed to have obtained while an officer in the British army in India. Among those who embraced the new faith were Colonel Celsus Price, of St. Louis, son of the late General Sterling Price, members of the family of Joseph Specht, a St. Louis merchant, and Mrs. W. L. B. G. Allen, the authoress. Howard established what he styled a school of philosophy at Gunston hall, on the Potomac, the former home of the Masons of Virginia, now the county seat of the Specht's. He is said to be in Canada at the present time. The indictments charge him with obtaining from the Specht's $4,000 in money and diamonds which cost $1,800. Mr. Specht has been investigating Howard's career for sometime and asserts that he has operated in New York, Boston, Burlington, N. J.; Newport, R. I.; St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, Chattanooga and other places under various names.

STRUCK A ROCK.

A Steamer Goes to the Bottom of the Lake.

BAY TORTAOK, Ont., Aug. 22.—The steamer Monarch, 160 tons burden, struck a rock and went to the bottom. August 19, at Long Sault, Rainy river, and fifty excursionists escaped on a rope. None were lost. The steamer was the largest on the lakes and was lost in fifty feet of water. News of the wreck was brought in by an excursionist, who returned last night.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The British Court of Inquiry Reports on the Kow Shing Case.

Japan Justified in Sinking the Ship—The Reported Battle Near Shanghai Not Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Aug 22 - The Japanese legation has received no news of the engagement between the Japanese and Chinese forces reported from Shanghai in despatches published this morning. The officials of the legation express the strongest confidence in the accuracy of the telegram received at the legation yesterday, announcing that the finding of the British naval court of inquiry at Shanghai in the Kow Shing case was favorable to Japan. The statement concerning the action of the court, members of the legation state, was undoubtedly based on official information, as was also the additional statement that the British admiral had reported to his government that, in his opinion, the sinking of the Kow Shing was justifiable. The legation characterizes as unqualifiedly incorrect the assertion that the commander of the Naniwa ordered his men to fire upon the survivors from the Kow Shing, who were struggling in the water.

TOKIO, Aug 22—It is officially announced that on June 30, the king of Corea declared himself independent of China and appealed to the Japanese to assist him in driving the Chinese from Asan. This, it is added, was done with the assistance of the Corean troops. The official announcement also says that on the same date, June 30 Corea denounced all treaties with China.

GLASGOW, Aug. 22—The Japanese consul here has protested against the detention of the Steamer Isham, ordered by the earl of Kimberley, secretary of state for foreign affairs, under the provisions of the foreign enlistment act. The consul claims that the Isham, which is a fast vessel recently sold by D. & W. Henderson to the Japanese government, was not intended to be used as a cruiser. When the steamship was sold to Japan her name was changed to "Tesamaru," but at the outbreak of the war her name was again changed to Isham.

CRUMP FOR CONGRESS.

A. F. A. Candidate Victorious in the Republican Convention.

BAY CITY, Mich., Aug 22—Greatly to the surprise as well as disappointment of the leading republicans of Bay county, Rasseau O Crump, of West Bay City, was last night nominated for congress at the convention held in East Tawas. Ten formal ballots were taken without a majority for any of the seven candidates, Crump leading with 31. The first formal ballot gave him the nomination as follows: Crump, 40; Kelley, of Alpena, 1; French, of Ogemaw, 23; Hart, of Midland, 1. Crump has never been considered as anything above the ordinary business man, and in his old home at Pittsford, N. Y., where he was born, the people will laugh when they hear that he has been nominated for congress.

Crump's main support in the convention came from American Protective association sources, and if Woodcock is nominated by the democrats a religious warfare will be fought in the Tenth district which many will regret. Crump is acknowledged to be a member of that association and Woodcock's position with regard to it is well known to the entire country, as he endeavored to expose it on the floors of congress. Crump will be opposed by such republicans as Carrington, Conley and ex-Congressman Wheeler, who have already gone upon record as opposed to his nomination.

ALIX THE DAY'S STAR.

The Trotting Queen Covers the Course in 2:05¾ at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22—Alix yesterday trotted in 2:05¾, at Washington park, and the exhibition was pronounced by nearly all horsemen present to be the greatest ever made in a sulky. It reduced the track record of 2:06¼, held by Nancy Hanks, and while it fell a second and a quarter short of the world's record, it was really a better performance, conditions considered. Washington park is at least a second and a half slow. It has not been so fast as formerly since new loam was placed on it before the June running meeting, and it is in need of a good hard rain. All the drivers agree that the track is slow. John Kelly, who handled Directum last year, said: "This is the greatest mile ever trotted. Had Alix been sent against her record last week at Terre Haute she would have undoubtedly beaten it."

Cholera Deaths.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—For the week ending at noon on August 20 thirty-two new cases of cholera and twenty five deaths from that disease reported from different parts of the German empire.

Crispi All Right.

ROME, Aug 22—There is no truth in the report that Signor Crispi is dead; on the contrary, the premier is enjoying the best of health.

Evans Nominated.

MRS IDA WHITE will leave today for Lima and Rosery Run, Ohio, for a week's stay with friends.

WHAT IS A DUDE?

Grand Master Workman Sovereign Gives a Definition.

He Says a Dude Can No More Be Described as a Cross Between Nobody and Nothing.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug 22—General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, addressed a large meeting of workingmen last night, in the course of which he said: "In the beginning, men started equally, but now the one class has nearly everything and millions, though willing to work are on the verge of starvation. While millions are starving the rich still find a place on earth for magnificent palaces and great parks, where they may hunt and enjoy life as they please to do. In America today there are 3,000,000 men willing and ready to work who are idle for want of work to do—molding themselves, or rather being molded into felons and beggars. Charity has been strained as it was never strained before, but still the cry for bread from starving throats is heard all over the land. These men are being turned into tramps. The tramp has been described as a cross between poverty and crime, but I think that the dude, a product of our civilization, can just as accurately be described as a cross between nobody and nothing. Both are the results, the outcome of monopoly—the monopoly that, unless it is throttled, will cause the death of the republic."

MARRIAGE OF ELOPERS.

Best Man and Bride's Maid Moved to Follow Their Example.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Aug 22.—William E. Miner and Miss Annie Singleton, of Turner Station, Ky., eloped to this city yesterday afternoon and were married by Magistrate Keigwin. They were accompanied by Ashley F. Kelley, of New Castle, and Miss Cleo Skinner, of Turner Station, who acted as attendants at the wedding. During the ceremony Kelley and Miss Skinner were seized with a mutual infatuation, coupled with a strong inclination to become one. The only impediment in the way to their union was the fact that Miss Skinner had already promised her hand in marriage to a man residing at Turner Station, and the wedding was announced for tomorrow. Miss Skinner was in a dilemma. She averred that if she married the man from Turners she could never love him.

The question was thoroughly canvassed among themselves. Miss Skinner decided to give up the man from Turners and marry Kelley. He at one time was her best ideal, but on account of Miss Skinner's parents disliking him he was not permitted to enter the Skinner family. No trouble was experienced in getting the license, and the couple were united in wedlock, after which the quartet left for their homes. The parties to the sudden marriage are members of Kentucky's first families.

OPPOSE DEBS PROPOSITION.

Sargent and Arnold Say Brotherhoods Will Decline to Lose Identity.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 22.—There is no belief at the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen that a consolidated organization of railway labor will result from the Debs proposition. Grand Master Sargent and Grand Secretary Arnold believe that the members of the brotherhoods will be more content than ever before to remain with the old line class organizations. Mr Sargent will recommend in his report to the international convention at Harrisburg next month that lodges which forfeited membership be permitted to resume their places without the payment of the first fee. The brotherhood chiefs will also do what they can to secure positions for individual members who lost their jobs by joining in the American Railway union strike.

LIMA ALDERMEN ARE BALKED.

President Hoehn Refuses to Put the Combine's Resolutions.

LIMA, Ohio, Aug. 22—The proceedings of the city council were marked with another row over the Hallwood paving contract and the "big nine" councilmen endeavored to get a resolution through that would have prevented any paving being done here for years. President Hughes declined to entertain the motion and declared the council adjourned, and he with two members and the city clerk left the council chamber. Councilman Spellacy was then placed in the chair by the combine and the resolution was passed. Lawyers say it is illegal and will not hold.

WILL RECEIVE THEIR FORTUNES

California Judge Orders Large Sums Paid to Mrs. Fair's Daughters.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 22—Judge Coffey, of the probate court, has ordered that the daughters of the late Mrs. Theresa Fair be awarded their portions of their mother's estate. The daughters are Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Miss Virginia Fair, of New York. They will receive $1,500,000 each. The distribution of the estate was opposed by their brother, Charles, because, under the terms of his mother's will, he can not receive his share of the $3,000,000 until he is thirty years of age. He is now about twenty six.

LICENSES IN MARENGO.

Policy of Thirty Years is Overturned Through Pique.

MARENGO, Ill., Aug 22—Marengo is in a fever of excitement over the action of the city council last night in granting saloon licenses at $1,200 per year. The town had been "dry" for thirty years and the present board had been no license by a tie vote. Liquor has been sold on the quiet, however, and yesterday the aldermen who held the controlling vote was summoned by the law and order league to appear as a witness against I. E. Barnes, who was being prosecuted for illegal selling. It irritated him so that he joined the license forces when a vote was taken last night. The town went no license by a majority of eighty-five last spring and the court dockets are full of judgments and unpaid fines.

WEAVERS' STRIKE.

Indications Point to a Long and Bitter Fight.

The Howland Mills Resolve the Matters of Reduction of Wages—The Strikers Jubilant.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug 22—The strike situation has undergone no material change since yesterday. All the mills remain closed and both sides seem to be as determined as ever. Secretary Ross, of the Spinners' union, and Treasurer Howland are today having a conference, at which the date of the reopening of the Howland corporations will be determined. Mr. Howland is being bitterly criticised by the other manufacturers. He is accused of unfair conduct, in as much as he was represented at the meeting of the treasurers by the agent of his mills, Byron Card, and has not carried out the agreement of that meeting. Messrs. Howland and Card, in interviews today, answer these attacks. Mr. Card states that Mr. Howland knew nothing of the meeting until long after it was over; that he (Card) attended it at the request of the treasurers, but he had no vote and that he agreed to post the notices of reduction, subject to Mr. Howland's action on his return. The latter, on his return to the city on Monday, rescinded the notice. The various unions held meetings today. At a mass meeting on the common today a speaker declared that the weavers had the right to go into every mill in the city and cut the cloth of their looms. Mayor Brownell has called a conference of the manufacturers and operatives for tomorrow evening.

HORRIBLE DEATHS.

Two Men Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

LAMOURE, N. D., Aug. 22—The boiler of a threshing engine on a farm eight miles southeast of here, exploded this morning, instantly killing John Lind and Louis Berg. The latter was blown 100 feet and frightfully mangled. Four men were more or less injured.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug 22—Chas. Peyton, a switchman in the Chesapeake and Ohio yards, went between two cars to make a coupling today and met with a horrible death. He did not see a bolt that had become loosened and projected so that it went entirely through his head suspending the body while the train moved two car lengths.

FAVORS THE SHIP CANAL.

Reports on the Proposed Connection of the Ohio River and the Lakes.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 22.—The provisional committee appointed to devise ways and means for the construction of the Lake Erie-ohio canal between the Ohio river and the lakes, met here yesterday. Colonel T. P. Roberts, engineer of the Monongahela River Navigation company, asserted that the water supply tributary to the canal is four times greater than needed and can be reached at a cost of $600,000. The cost of the canal would not exceed $30,000,000. It would have have a capacity of 15,000,000 tons per annum, double the present tonnage of the railroads carrying the same territory. John T. Shaw estimated that the commercial interests and population of the territory through which the canal would pass would double, and the railroads would really be beneficiaries of the improvement. An executive committee was appointed to prepare a statement for the public. The provisional committee will meet again September 1.

CALLAHAN GUILTY.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22—At 11:35 this morning there was a commotion in the court room by the announcement that the jury reached a verdict in the Callahan case. Deputy Reyes came into court and saw Judge Moise, who at once ascended the bench and ordered the jury brought down. The accused was brought in and the different attorneys took their pieces. Capt. James Buckley took his seat in the front row as foreman, and the jury was polled. Then a verdict of guilty was presented. There was an immense crowd in and around the building as the announcement was made, and the news spread with great rapidity. Callahan received the news stoically.

The crime for which John T. Callahan was convicted was demanding and receiving bribes while a member of the city council. The most important count was the demand made on Mr. Lyman Wydney, a coal dealer, who desired certain wharf privileges in order to successfully conduct his business. After several interviews with Callahan in regard to the matter, Mr. Wydney paid the sergeant demanded, $300, and soon afterwards the council granted the privileges requested. There were several indictments against Callahan for similar offenses.

MORDHURST HONORED.

Elected General Grand Recorder of the Masonic Order.

Charters Granted to New Lodges in the West—Delegates Having a Grand Time.

TOPEKA, Kas., Aug 22—About 300 prominent Masons from all the states in the union, representing 750,000 members and a total membership of 150,000 are in Topeka, attending the twenty-ninth annual triennial convention of the grand chapter of the Royal Arch Masons, of America. The delegates were treated to a drive about the city this morning, after which a reception at the Grand Opera house took place. The convocation of the general grand chapter did not convene at the hall until 1 o'clock. Charters were granted to councils at Denver, Salt Lake City, Trinidad, Durango, Akron, Canon City, Spokane, Seattle, Pueblo, Muskegon, McAllister and other points. The following officers were elected for the ensuing three years:

General Grand Master—John W. Coburn, of New York.

General Grand Captain of the Guard—William H. Mayo, of St. Louis, Mo.

General Grand Steward—Andrew P. Swantzom, of St. Paul, Minn.

This afternoon the ladies of the visiting delegates were treated to a drive.

INDIANA

Telegrams From Different Parts of the State.

MIDDLETOWN, Ind., Aug. 22—The Irondale Tinplate works of this place will begin operations on the 1st of September, with a force of 130 employes. This is the industry that was given a site and a cash bonus of $30,000 by Middletown people to locate a rolling mill, but the great depression in the iron industry induced the company to make the change. The original contract also called for the employment of 100 men.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Aug. 22—David Strabler was assaulted by "circus nobes" Monday night, beaten until unconscious and robbed of $200. The highwaymen are supposed to have gone to Watson, a station five miles north of here, where a gang of twenty-five thieves are said to be rendezvousing. Strabler's condition is such that he is unable to give a description of the men who robbed him.

FRANKLIN, Ind., Aug. 22—Daniel Doty, charged with stabbing, with intent to kill John W. Turner, was bound over to the circuit court of this county yesterday morning. His bond was fixed at $3 000. His bondsmen are his father, John Doty, and J. H. Gillaspy. The cutting occurred a month ago, and the wound is still open. Doty is wealthy. Both men live near Providence, nine miles west of this city.

NEW PALESTINE, Ind., Aug. 22.—The creamery plant at this place, owned by Wilkins & Strong, was totally destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The fire is supposed to have originated in the engine room, and when discovered was under such headway that it was beyond control. The actual loss is unknown; amount of insurance, $1,500.

BEDFORD, Ind., Aug 22—A little four year-old son of August Schultz, in the north part of the city, was burned to death by his clothes catching fire from some matches with which he and other children were playing.

BRAZIL, Ind., Aug. 22—Samuel King, a farmer residing near Ames, was instantly killed by being run over by a south bound local freight on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

Young People's Societies Will Oppose It in Politics.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 22—A call is being circulated in the Christian Endeavor, Epworth league and Baptist Young People societies and among other church people of the state, for a mass meeting, to be held in Indianapolis soon, of persons independent in politics, who propose to antagonize the influence of the saloon in politics and in favor of enforcement of the laws and good citizenship generally. The movement is being quietly pushed and the men at the head of it say they do not yet know what the extent of it will be. They say they hope for great results. It is understood that an effort will be made to organize the independent voters throughout the state. The movement is the outgrowth of the "good citizenship" meetings held here last spring, when John G. Woolley talked in favor of independence in political action. The men interested in the movement say it has already brought about desired results. They point to the renomination by acclamation of Joseph S. Bailey for judge of the supreme court by the democrats as one thing the movement has accomplished. They say the saloonkeepers of the state said Mr Bailey should not be renominated. Persons who join the movement will be expected to vote for the best men, no matter what political ticket the candidates' names appear upon.

Splenetic Fever.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug 22—A consignment of forty eight Texas suffering from Texas, or splenetic fever, was received at the stock yards yesterday. They came from Kansas City. When one of the cars was opened two carcasses were found inside. Post mortems showed the presence of the disease. The entire consignment was slaughtered and the carcasses sent to the rendering works.

ANOTHER ERROR

Found in the Recently Passed Tariff Bill.

No Provisions Made for the Expenses of Collecting Income Taxes and the Clause is a Dead Letter.

WASHINGTON, Aug 22—In addition to the long list of errors found in the German tariff bill, the surprising discovery has been made by the treasury department officials that no appropriation has been made for putting into effect the income tax provisions. The collectors of internal revenue can do nothing under these circumstances in the direction of preparing to collect the tax. The treasury officials claim to be blameless, for they forwarded to the appropriations committee, more than a month ago, an estimate for an initial appropriation of $500,000 to be used during the current fiscal year in carrying out the income tax provisions of the tariff bill, if it should become a law. The secretary of the treasury, through the commissioners of internal revenue, estimated that the appointment of 250 deputy collectors and 200 additional clerks in the Washington office would be necessary to begin the preliminary work.

Whether by accident or design neither the house nor the senate appropriation committees paid any attention to Secretary Carlisle's estimate and the internal revenue collectors are therefore helpless and must therefore defer all arrangements until congress provides the necessary money. This will not be done at the present session, as, owing to the lack of a quorum in either house, no business can be transacted except by unanimous consent, which, of course, can not be obtained for the purpose of saving the income tax law from disaster. Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller admits that congress strangely failed to provide the necessary money, but is hopeful that when the two houses reassemble in December the amount of his estimate will be included in an urgent deficiency appropriation bill, so that the administration of the new law will be made possible.

There were just twenty one senators present today when the vice president called the senate to order. The deficiency bill was received from the house immediately after the chaplain's invocation, and having been signed by the speaker, the vice president immediately attached his signature. The absence of a quorum was immediately pointed out by Mr. Aldrich and only thirty two senators answered the roll-call, eleven less than a quorum. A consultation was immediately held among the democratic senators. Mr. Blackburn urging that the absentees might as well be sent for today as to-morrow. The decision of this imprompta caucus seemed to be in the same line, as Mr. Harris moved that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to request the presence of absent senators, which was agreed to. There was a long delay while the list of absentees was being made up for the sergeant-at-arms. One by one they reported, Mr. Blanchard making the thirty seventh.

At 1:40 p. m. the senate adjourned.

Chairman Wilson has gone to West Virginia but will be back tomorrow at which time it is expected he will see President Cleveland and some information may be given as to when congress can wind up its business. The house was not in session today and very few members in appearance. Speaker Crisp was in his private room winding up work. He said he had no information as to the disposition of the tariff bill or the probability of adjournment.

SAYRES DESIRES IT.

Representative Sayres, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, brands as false and sensational the story printed today to the effect that the startling discovery had been made that the appropriations committee had negligently or by design failed to allow the sum necessary to collect the income tax. "Every allowance for the collection of the tax has been made in accordance with the request of the treasury department," said Mr. Sayres. "The commissioner of internal revenue conferred with me last week on the subject and I asked him to talk with Secretary Carlisle and then submit a resolution covering just what he wanted. This was sent to me on Saturday. It called for an additional $2,000 for clerical help in the internal revenue bureau. I introduced the resolution on Monday last and it was passed. It is just as the treasury department authorities want it."

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A Young Lady's Dress Set on Fire by a Locomotive Spark.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug 22—Miss Edith S. Clark, eighteen years old, daughter of a Pittsburg bank official, was walking near the Fort Wayne railroad at Clifton, when a spark from a locomotive set fire to her clothing. In a moment she was enveloped in flame. Crazed by fright and pain, she rushed across the track and sprang into the Ohio river, from which she was rescued with difficulty. She is in a very serious condition, but may recover.

FORT WAYNE'S PARKS

Just Now at the Height of Their Beauty.

The New Plans Here for the Beautifying of Swinney Park—Improvements This Summer.

Through the kindness of Thomas De Vilbiss, member of the board of public works, a SENTINEL representative was last evening given an inspection of the city parks—five in number.

Fort Wayne has about eighty acres which are given over to park purposes. Some of them are merely breathing places, and Swinney park is yet to be beautified artificially, but for a city of this size eighty acres for park purposes is not a bad showing.

Just now the parks are in the height of their beauty. They require the attention of seven men under the charge of Superintendent Doswell, who in turn is responsible to the board of public works. Our parks never looking better, and it is a wonder that more people do not take advantage of them. Beautiful flowers, fresh green grass, flashing fountains and inviting seats in shady nooks ought surely tempt more people on hot days than they really do.

The North Side park was first visited. Here is where the board has been expending some of its limited means the past summer. The North Side park contains about fifteen acres and has a most promising future. It has a six years' start, and bids fair to be one of our most attractive spots. The total amount of available cash for park improvements this summer was $900, and only a part of this sum could be used. What improvements that were made, however, shows that the money was wisely expended.

Two permanent improvements have been made at the North Side park this season. One is an artificial drinking mound and the other is an artificial pond at the northeastern corner. The mound, or rockery is the conception of Mr. DeVilbiss and it is a work of beauty and twice as ornamental as an iron fountain. It consists of a great pile of boulders from the center of which comes a gurgling spring—the water shooting out in a dozen different places and falling into a basin on the east side. The overflow goes to swell the tiny lake a short distance to the east. This will next season be filled with lilies. Such a thing may be that the waterworks trustees will build a dam in Spy Run creek just below the bridge leading to Spy Run avenue. If this is done it will make an excellent boating place and add greatly to the beauty of the park.

The next places visited were the Old Fort and Hayden parks. The former has some very pretty flower designs, one of which reads, "Old Fort, 1794-1894,"—a mute appeal, by the way, for a centennial celebration worthy of the occasion. Hayden park contains about one acre, and, entirely surrounded by dwellings, adds greatly to the value of property in its locality. It looks green and fresh despite the long dry spell.

The most ornamental park in the city is the McCulloch park on Broadway. Once an old cemetery it outlived its usefulness in that direction and is now justly admired by those who seen merely glances at it as they go by on the cars. Mr. Doswell has shown his ability here as a floral designer, as the many highly ornamental designs attest.

The greatest possibilities await the development of Swinney park—which is really a park now and contains sixty acres peculiarly fitted for this use. A winding river, giant forest trees and gentle grassy slopes all go to make up so attractive place even now. The plans for beautifying the park arrived yesterday evening from Chicago, where they were made by Landscape Gardner Lindroth, who laid out Lincoln park. The plans are now on exhibition at the office of the board of public works. The estimated cost will be from $25,000 to $30,000.

The main entrance has been made at Washington boulevard, and at the base of the elevation on the eastern side of the park is a triangular plot in which to locate a monument. The road then diverges, taking in the old race course, and the center of that field is to be occupied by a lake. In the center of the lake is to be erected a music pavilion; to the west of the lake, in the southwest part of the park, are located base tennis, base ball grounds, etc. The present timbered part of the ground is devoted to a picnic ground, and a channel is to be cut through the ground, making a cut off in the river and furnishing a pretty effect. The portion of the park devoted especially to landscape gardening is located at the southeast quarter of the grounds, and ample provision has been made for it. A greenhouse will be located in the low, sheltered ground in this locality.

New Life Put Into the Centennial Celebration Project.

A Committee of Twenty-five Representative Citizens Appointed on the Ways and Means.

The people of Fort Wayne are not going to let the long talked of centennial celebration go by default. This is evident from the action taken last evening at a mass meeting of citizens held in the circuit court room.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Oakley and Col. R. S. Robertson was made chairman. The colonel reviewed the causes which had led to the resignation of the board of directors and said that the directory and the people were equally anxious for a celebration and that it would be a lasting shame and disgrace for the city to let the event go by unobserved. Smaller towns had been holding appropriate celebrations and Fort Wayne could and ought to do the same, as far more historic interest was attached to this point.

A friend was in favor of the citizens giving the city and county officials an indemnity bond, guaranteeing them against the loss of any funds advanced.

Mr. Moynihan moved that a committee of twenty-five citizens be selected by the chair to devise ways and means of holding the celebration. He felt certain that the legislature would legalize the use of any funds appropriated by either city or county. Mr. Moynihan's motion was carried.

Capt. A. H. Dougall spoke upon the necessity of prompt action as the time was nearly at hand. He also spoke of the success of the Defiance and other celebrations.

Peter Hindt moved that the old directory be appointed by the meeting and requested to carry forward the work they have already commenced, and the motion was unanimously adopted. The directory is composed of the following persons: Mayor C. E. Oakley, president; Hons. R. S. Robertson, J. B. White, Charles F. Mubler, Charles McCulloch, J. F. W. Meyer, A. H. Dougall, secretary.

Colonel Robertson then announced the following committee of twenty-five provided for, as follows:

A. J. Moynihan, N. R. Leonard, W. D. Page, E. A. K. Hackett, John Mohr, jr., G. W. Finley, J. M. Bass, J. W. White, C. S. Bash, H. C. Paul, C. B. Everett, J. C. Peters, Louis Fox, S. C. Lumbard, Henry G. Olds, H. C. Berghoff, R. C. Rumble, J. D. Sernighausen, C. D. Bond, A. Hattersley, M. Frank, H. C. Graffe, D. N. Foster, J. B. Reuss, S. F. Bowser.

The committee is requested to meet with the directory at the Aveline house parlors, Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

UNDER THE WHEELS.

A Wabash Freight Train Runs Over William Maxfield.

He Was Attempting to Climb Into an Open Box Car—Lying Very Low at the Hospital.

A sad accident happened at 9:30 o'clock this morning, about 100 feet west of Fairfield avenue, on the Wabash railroad. William Maxfield, an eighteen year old lad, whose home is in Huntington, fell under a freight train and was probably fatally injured.

The young man was in company with a number of boys of about the same age and all of them attempted to board an out-going freight and steal a ride to Huntington. William tried to climb into an open empty box car and some way lost his hold and fell. Both legs went under the wheels and were run over. A companion pulled the unfortunate boy from under the train and he was tenderly carried to the side of the track, where Dr. Enslen and others helped to bind up the wound. The right leg was run over at the ankle and the left leg between the knee and hip. The members were fearfully crushed and the boy suffered terribly. He was taken to the Hope hospital, where Drs. Porter and Schraderattended.

The physicians concluded not to make any amputation this morning, as the boy was very low from the shock. They will try to save the left leg, but the right one will have to come off just below the knee.

The boy was well dressed and his parents are well to do and highly respected. The accident is particularly sad.

It happened that the boy's mother was in this city visiting relatives by the name of Staub, on High street, and she was immediately notified. The boy's father is a turner by trade and works for Capt. F. F. Bolte in the Huntington wheel works.

SMALLPOX SCARE.

The Board of Health Will Hold a Special Meeting Today.

The board of health will hold a meeting this afternoon and probably quarantine the Goshen gravel road. A lady from Noble county reported fifteen cases of smallpox at Churubusco, but this is undoubtedly a fake. There is one suspicious case in that place, however, and it is fully quarantined.

Is Now Assured.

The meeting of citizens held at the circuit court rooms last night to discuss the matter of celebrating the centennial anniversary of the building of the old fort, which was the beginning of the city's history, resulted in the appointment of a committee to devise ways and means for its proper celebration. The proceedings of this meeting are given in detail in our local columns and from them it will be seen that the celebration is now an assured fact. The arrangements were placed in the hands of a committee of citizens and they will formulate plans for the raising of the money necessary to give us a celebration worthy of the city and the events which it will commemorate.

THE SENTINEL has repeatedly urged the importance of the proper celebration of this event and the necessity that all citizens should join in the effort to make it a success. Aside from this duty which we are under to honor the pioneer heroes who paved the way for the civilization and the benefits which we are today enjoying, is the fact that its celebration would be of great material benefit to our city, for it would bring to Fort Wayne thousands of people from all the surrounding cities and towns. Let the centennial celebration be pushed vigorously and let it be made a great occasion. The people are heartily in favor of it and will join and uphold the committee in any action they may take in the matter.

Era of Record Breaking.

The racing queen, Alix, has broken another record, and this time it was one that Nancy Hanks made over the same track on September 23, 1892. Her mile of 2:06½ was the mark for the handsome mare to aim at, and well she did her part, for, at Chicago yesterday, in the Washington Park races she covered the mile course in the remarkable time of 2:05½.

The time is not so far past but that it is within easy reach of personal recollection when the trotting record of 2:17½ was regarded as phenomenal. Now there is an almost endless number of horses in that class, and a 2:17½ mark these halcyon days would hardly excite enthusiasm at a pumpkin show.

There is a score of trotters on the American turf, any one of which can make the mile in 2:10 or better without a skip, and there is at least one (Nancy Hanks) with a record of 2:04. That is about the speed of an ordinary express train. Many experts are of many minds regarding the limit of endurance of trotters.

Mr. Robert Bonner, who has made a life-time study of horses, contends that a record of two minutes will be made, but is of the opinion that the time can never be made less than that because it is an absolutely physical impossibility. Still, if it is possible to knock off four more seconds from the present record, there is apparently no reason why it should not be lowered to 1:56. But there must be an end of it somewhere, and it is difficult to arrive at any other conclusion than that the end is already very near at hand.

Signs of Good Times.

Two of the most pronounced protectionist papers in the country are the Bulletin, of the Iron and Steel association, and the Wool and Cotton Reporter. It is interesting to observe what they think of the business situation.

The Bulletin says: "This is a great country, with boundless resources and wonderful opportunities, and now that the tariff question is settled and congress is about ready to adjourn, it is not reasonable to suppose that these hard times can continue much longer without amelioration. Prices can not advance to the old figures of a few years ago. Labor can not receive its old wages; but the demand for all products must now increase. There is plenty of money money to pay for them, and with this increased demand must come better times for capital and labor."

The Reporter says: "It would be profitless to conjecture and unwise to predict, even were there a clearly tangible basis for prophecy, what the effect will be upon manufacturing interests, but the well known conservatism, business sagacity and enterprise of the manufacturers afford good ground for the hope that they will have adapted themselves to the situation as they find it before the new schedules become operative. In the meantime there is the fact of the vast consuming power of the country, the probability of an increased demand which has been long latent, the comparatively small stock of raw material in sight and the strong probability that every pound of it will be needed before another clip."

If these two protectionist organs see some light in the situation with a new tariff bill in the books, truly the sky must be rosy to other eyes indeed, indeed, "this is a great country, with boundless resources and wonderful opportunities"—a workingman's country that can't be kept down.

The Income Tax.

The income tax provision in the tariff bill begins to operate on January 1, 1895, and continues until January 1, 1900. The tax (2 per cent) is to be levied on all incomes above $4,000. It is to be paid not only by all who reside within the country, on incomes derived from any source, but by citizens of the United States residing abroad, and by all residents of foreign countries on incomes derived from property situated in the United States or from business carried on here. The tax is on the income of the year previous to that for which it is levied. Therefore the first tax will be levied on incomes received in 1894.

There are two classes of incomes recognized by the bill—the incomes of individuals and the incomes of corporations. The taxable income of a corporation is all its income above its operating expenses, including the sums paid to shareholders. The tax of 2 per cent. is paid by the corporation. Therefore that part of an individual's income which is derived from dividends on the shares of a corporation that has paid the tax is deducted, on his return, from his own taxable income.

There are exemptions allowed by the bill in computing an individual's income besides the $4,000. They are as follows: The necessary expenses of conducting a business, all interest paid or due within the year, local taxes, losses in trade or from fires, storms or shipwrecks, not compensated for by insurance or otherwise; worthless debts, and income on which the tax has been paid by corporations.

As to corporations, charitable, religious and educational corporations are exempted, as are states, counties and municipalities, building and loan associations, savings banks having no stockholders, receiving no more than $1,000 in a year from any one depositor, and dividing all the yearly profits among the depositors except a contribution to a 10 per cent. surplus. Mutual companies, including insurance companies, are all exempt.

Every person having an income of $3,500 must report it to the collector of internal revenue for his district, or his deputy. Salaries received from corporations are reported by the corporations to the collector of the recipient's district. The tax on the salaries of officials of the United States is to be deducted by the paymaster.

The collector may require a return to be verified by oath. The collector or his deputy may increase the amount of income reported if "he has reason to believe that the same is underestimated." If there is a neglect or refusal to make a return, or if a return is fraudulent, the collector or his deputy shall himself make a list, by examination of the person taxed, or other evidence. A 50 per cent. penalty is to be charged for neglect or refusal, and 100 per cent. penalty for fraud.

A person may declare that he has not $4,000 of income liable to be assessed or that he has paid his income tax elsewhere. If the collector or deputy is convinced that the declaration is true he may grant an exemption. If a return is increased by the collector or deputy the person taxed may offer proof that the increase is unjust, but the officer will not be obliged to take the facts shown as conclusive, and it is within his discretion to refuse relief. An appeal from his decision may be taken to the commissioner of internal revenue.

If a corporation does not file its statement a fine of $1,000 is to be levied on it, and 2 per cent. a month is to be charged on the amount of tax due until it is paid.

The tax is payable on July 1 in each year. If it is not paid within ten days after that a penalty of 5 per cent. is to be charged, together with interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per month.

Chin, Not Cheek.

A whimsical artist on the New York World has been making pictures of great men with and without their chins. In place of the lower part of the face as it actually is he substitutes a weak jaw with as little chin as can possibly be put there without taking it all away. The result is striking. Washington, Lincoln and Charleston without their chins would look utterly insignificant—almost like idiots. Rose Bonheur has a particularly square, determined lower jaw. When the chin that used to be considered the feminine model of beauty is attached to her face, the result is something indescribable. The chin rules the world.

When a person is all jaw and no brains, he is a great, forceful brute, without conscience or remorse—taking his nearest way to whatever his animal desires call for. Of a photograph of Peter Jackson, the negro prize fighter, a sporting man said: "Look at that jaw. That's where Peter gets his speed, and no man has more." In truth, it is where all people get their sand, statesmen and prize fighters alike. If you want a person with vim and endurance to carry through great enterprises, select always the one with the strong square chin. The man will not retreat any more than his chin does. If you yourself have not a good chin, cultivate one by attributing to your word when once it is passed and by resolutely accomplishing what ever you undertake.

A four old bachelor takes a fiendish delight in calling attention to the fact that there is one thing women cannot do anyhow, and that is tie their masculine cravats. "They may wear 'em," he says, "but they can't tie 'em. I've seen 'em try 'em," he continued, warming up, "that is 10 minutes would drive a man into lecturing if he had to wear the blessed things."

EL-AKKO.

Soldier, when I behold you go
To warm loves and all sweet pride
Through crowded streets, told women's woe,
Obey your mistress, death your bride—

Soldier, as I behold you pass,
Iron raises the trumpet, iron's your head,
And, with your sword forever, through the brass
The only form your lips wear is dead.

Oh, then such rapture shook my blood,
Of pride and anguish, love and fear,
As never maiden understood,
Except she felt a soldier dear.

And from that hour I like bereft
Of all the life that was mine,
For by that blast my heart was left,
But, soldier, both the halves are thine!
—George Douglas in London Academy.

AN APPOINTMENT.

A man in bachelor chambers, an open letter in his hand, an amused expression on his face, with a complexion of gentlified vanity and a vague hint of indulgent meanness.

This was the letter:

"Probably you have forgotten me. I was but one among the many you charmed with your smiles both a week ago. I know that you did not hear my name. To me that dance was an event—an era. Of course I am transcending the ordinary rules of society in writing this, but I have a feeling that you ought to know it. I would like to speak to you once more. Then perhaps you would not think too hard of what I have done. I shall be at Mrs. Rogerson's cottage, at the northern corner, on Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock. I shall wear a pink rose at my throat."

Certainly this was very advanced. There was some excuse for the smile of gratified vanity and half contemptuous indulgence on the young man's handsome face. He tried for a few moments to recall any one among the half dozen strangers to whom he had been introduced at the 3 ball likely to send such a letter to herself, but failed.

The invitation was simply rejected. It was growing late, and he had more than one engagement that evening.

"I am deeply interested. Certainly I will be at the place and position and at the hour. It seems that you know me and require no mark of recognition, but I shall wear a buttonhole of tuberose."

As he folded the letter it occurred to him that he might be the subject of a hoax, but the half timid words had the ring of truth, and he dismissed the idea. He addressed the envelope, as directed to, a circulating library where letters were received.

* * * * * * *

A girl, sitting in a morning room, just 44 hours later—a very pretty girl, young and innocent looking, too, but one of whom might be predicted divergence from looked ruckus.

The result of the first serious divergence lay before her in the shape of the young man's letter addressed to Miss M., and she was regarding it with somewhat fearful countenance.

That she had made preparations to carry out her part of the programme was apparent from the perfect bloom of the France lamp-shining on specimen glass beside the letter. The room was in a house in M——square, and there was still an hour and a half before her presence would be required at the garrison corner in Regent street. She had no cause to fear any difficulty in keeping her appointment.

The door opened, and a second girl entered—tall, fair, aristocratic. The first was a fair one, but her hair was irregular—fell over her forehead and round her ears in unconfined waves and curls, that of the newcomer was drawn tightly back, and rendered into a smooth knot behind, on a well shaped head.

"Oh, Edythe, you darling, how sweet of you to come this afternoon!"

The gray gowned girl jumped up and threw her arms around the friend's neck. She was delighted to all her actions.

"I haven't long to stay, Kittie—just half an hour. I must go down Oxford street to do some shopping. Can't you come?"

Kittie hesitated. Her letter was in her pocket.

"No, Di," she said slowly, "not this afternoon. I—I have a toothache. I don't think I shall go out."

"Poor little girl! Can I do anything for you? I wish you would come, though, Kittie. I have to get a bonnet."

"A bonnet! Where are you going—Mme. Teresa's?"

"No, Bassett's, I think. I saw one in her window that I rather liked."

A sudden inspiration came into Kittie's pretty head. She leaned forward. The sparkle came back to her gray eyes, the carmine to the corners of her mouth.

"Oh, Edythe, why don't you go to Mme. Mathilde's? I like her style so much better. At any rate, you might try. And, now I think of it, I will come, but I must call at Mrs. Hood's first. Dear me! I am not to forget. I will meet you outside Mme. Mathilde's at 4 o'clock."

"Oh, will you? That's a darling Kittie! Then I needn't have Jane, and we'll go to Fuller's for tea."

When Kittie arose a few minutes after to bid a temporary farewell to Kittie, the latter took the 3a France from her glass.

"What an exquisite rose, Kittie! Who gave it to you?"

"No one. I am just going to put it in your dress. You want just a touch of color."

* * * * * * *

Four o'clock and Edytha Vansittart stood outside Mme. Mathilde's looking for Kittie, the pink rose still in her pale blue gown, nestling among the black lace at her throat, and no Kittie came.

Some one else came, half stopping, started a moment, passed and came back—a strikingly handsome man well dressed, with a certain battledore of fashionable.

He hesitated and paused, because it was difficult to reconcile the letter from Miss M. with the aristocratic, haughty figure in the doorway of Mme. Mathilde's bonnet shop. He came back, because the necessities were too complete for mistake. Here were Outs, time, place, flower and the lady herself, evidently looking for some one. He lifted his hat. It was strange she had not seen him, or, at any rate, his buttonhole.

"I am glad," he said softly, "that you have not disappointed me. I have lived in a state of expectancy since I received your note."

The young lady in the doorway brought back her eyes from their voyage in search of a remarkable Kittie and stared at him indignantly.

"I think you make a mistake," she said coldly.

He drew a step backward. There was no mistaking the tone. He still kept his hat in his hand.

"I beg your pardon. How can that be? Did you not mention the hour, the place?"—

"I say again you make a mistake. If you p rsist, I must call for assistance."—I am waiting for a friend."

What did it all mean? Involuntarily his hand clasped the lapel of his coat just below the buttonhole.

Seeing that he still stared and did not move she retreated belligerently into the shop, half crying.

"Oh, this false Kittie!"

Kittie meanwhile was still sitting alone in the morning room in M—— square. She was wondering how her plan had progressed, whether the young man with the ruggonette in his buttonhole had indeed been there, and if he had taken any notice of Edythe.

She could certainly hear the whole story. Edythe was so correct and staid, she would be dreadfully indignant. Would she, Kittie, ever see the hero of her first, demi semi? Not that she had ever been cruel—she was half sorry and half inclined to wish she had taken it.

* * * * * * *

It was at a meeting concert that Edythe Vansittart made the acquaintance of Dick Willoughby.

He did so in fact, going there with a friend who happened to know Miss Vansittart slightly in the express hope of seeing her and making an introduction, and he succeeded, having a seat sitting in the aisle behind, but Dick never noticed her. He was entirely occupied by his desire to repair to Miss Vansittart his unfortunate mistake.

He saw that she was completely incognito of any design in wearing the pink rose. He did not care to explain the hidden meaning of the strange rose device, partly on account of the weakness of his case, which, candidly, spoke from a sense of honor toward his unknown correspondent. He still thought it possible that the letter might be genuine.

If, on the other hand, he had been tricked, it was safer to pose before Miss Vansittart as a villain than a victim. Therefore he strove to make his peace by humble avowal of folly and abject promises of non-interest. She had thought him a lover, he said.

Three weeks later Edythe Vansittart came into the morning room of the house in M—— square with the news of her engagement. She was very content and prosperous and happy, very reasonably fond of her Dick.

Dick Willoughby was rich, and Edythe was already planning her trousseau. She was to have a few gowns from Worth.

Kittie was regarded as the friend of the season, and Kittie was one of the bridesmaids.

* * * * * * *

It was at a ball at Arvalson Hall that Mrs. Dick Willoughby regnant, she had been ordered abroad for the winter, and Dick and his wife, lingering south on their trial journey, came there to see her.

Kittie was by the open window, her fawn shawler, more childlike than of old, her eyes larger. Dick Willoughby sat by her side. Edythe had gone into the room. They were leaving Arvalson on the morrow, and she had some purchases to make.

"You will come back quite strong for next season, Kittie."

The girl was silent. Then, turning her eyes upon him, pathetic and full of tears, "You have been very good to me, Dick, and I want to tell you that I don't think I shall come back again."

"I have done nothing for you, child."

There was a look in the man's throat. He spoke from her side for a moment. He went through the motions of a ball at 8, last spring? I had fancied all along that I had known you somewhere before."

There was no answer. Kittie's head crept up to shield her eyes, her face.

The man knelt down by her side and drew the hand away.

"Darling, tell me, was it you who should have worn the pink rose?"

It was a inaudible whisper. Still there was no answer. The red blood waved right up to the soft ruffled hair, but she would not lift her eyes.

"Oh, my love, my little love, why have I known you late?" He spoke inaudible to a sob.

Kittie never spent another season in town. When the autumn came there was a newly made grave in the English quarter of the cemetery at Arcadian marked by a white cross and planted with La France roses. The doctors said that she had inherited consumptive tendencies, which no cure would check.—Edith's Journal.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

Harry Brock's life had been spent for the most part in his mother's nickname. He had cared for her as a daughter would have done and many an hour he had spent reading stories to the chronic invalid. He was sentimental and romantic and at 18 thought himself a very old young man. When Mrs. Brock, at last awakening to a sense of her selfishness in keeping him constantly at her side, sent him on a western trip for a change, the native life and scenes about him were novel to his inexperienced eyes. So little had his time and thoughts been his own that he was now like a child thrown for the first time dependent upon the world.

While at Socorro, N. M., he was wandering around when he passed the convent. Many young girls were trooping for a walk, following two white capped, black robed nuns. Very discreet and demure the scholars looked, hardly daring to lift their eyes toward the handsome young man staring at them with respectful admiration and curiosity. All one pair of eyes glanced into his, and in youth one look is enough. This one who most attracted his attention was a tall girl with black hair and eyes. Her face was clear and colorless except her lips, which were scarlet. Her greatest attraction was her graceful manner and a charming air she had of distinction and dignity. Harry decided she was the most beautiful girl he had ever seen and called her, in his thoughts, the Spanish princess. He haunted the convent and was rewarded one by sight of her at an open window. He lifted his hat, and she did not look displeased, although she discreetly closed the blind, but this may have been because the priest was just then entering the gate.

Harry went home and planned a skillful disguise—that of an elderly Mexican selling wares out of a basket. With the aid of a stick he limped along and went by the convent. As luck would have it, the young lady to be admired was in the yard. With girlish curiosity she leaned over the fence to glance at the articles in the old vender's basket. One of "the sisters," standing at the window, looked at the scene, but she evidently thought there was no harm in an elderly Mexican. Meanwhile Harry did not wait for any preliminaries or another opportunity, but with the ardor of the young learned out the whole story of his sudden affection. So romantic a youth, who would not be captivated by such flattering devotion? The sister was coming toward them, but the young girl managed to give her name—Loreta Sanchez—and to murmur in perfect English, "I will be home next month at San Antonio. Look for the large adobe house, with porch all around, up on the hill!"

Harry walked away as full of bliss for streets then he right into the arms of a constable coming to arrest him. The town had been troubled for some time by petty thefts and more serious burglaries. The police were watching suspicious, and this constable, whose house was in the vicinity of Harry's boarding house, had his own suspicious views of a young man who entered a house dressed like a gentleman and afterward appeared as a poor old Mexican peddler. So he escorted the young fellow before a justice of the peace. The trial given Harry afterward caused him great amusement. He saw that he was regarded with suspicion, and he viewed with alarm the crowd of wild, rough looking fellows gathered in the adobe room where court was held. He had heard enough about the primitive and expeditious methods of frontier justice to believe that his life was in danger.

He had begged to have his own clothes brought from the boarding house, and, having changed, respecting also his wig and false beard, felt more like himself. When called to the stand, he asked to be allowed to tell his story. With many blushes, it must be confessed, yet with great candor, he explained the situation to the surprised men in the justice. "All the world loves a lover." The threatening faces of the crowd became friendly and smiling. The court adjourned with a laugh on the part of a pretty, good natured girl, slapped Harry on the back and cried out: "Well, you're released. I wish you success, for in spite of your queer, old fashioned, romantic sentiments, which no one

Charles T. Strawbridge, of the Bass works, is suffering with his annual attack of hay fever, from which there has been no escape for the past twelve years.

John Polhemus, of Horace street, has accepted a position as fireman for the Pittsburg. He ran in with Engineer Krause, on the shop "pony" at the east car shops.

The Indianapolis and Vincennes railway has purchased 200 tons of steel rails in Pittsburg and will soon begin relaying their tracks. The rails are now being shipped.

Marsh Humphrey, messenger in Supt G. L. Potter's office, is enjoying his annual vacation. He is now in Chicago, but will return tomorrow and then go to Pittsburg.

East bound shipments from Chicago last week amounted to 45,589 tons, against 49,255 tons for the preceding week, and 44,882 for the corresponding week of last year.

Mr. Schmucker, assistant foreman of the Pennsylvania's shops at Chicago, is in the city. Three years ago Mr. Schmucker worked in the Pittsburg machine shop here.

C. P. Cherry and family have returned from a sojourn of two weeks in northern Michigan. Mr. Cherry is chief clerk in Storekeeper Cox's office at the Pittsburg shops.

There is said to be good grounds for the report that Eugene Dubs is to resign as editor of the Locomotive Firemen's Gazette, and that J. S. Maynard will be selected to fill the position for the present.

A special train bearing General Manager Joseph Woods and his staff passed through the city at 10 o'clock this morning. Mr. Woods had been at Chicago for several days and is now en route home.

C. H. Worth, of the Fort Wayne Electric company's works, has been sent to Baltimore, Md., to engage in the construction of the Wood arc lighting system for the Maryland Electric company.

Affairs in the Pittsburg coal mining district are not in a settled condition by any means. The bosses threat en to reduce wages to the standard prevailing before the strike if certain evils are not remedied.

A Boston financial paper says the present board of directors of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road will be ousted at the coming annual meeting and that the road, being in the hands of a receiver, no annual report will be made.

Charles Bodenbeck, of Rhinesmith & Simonson's factory, who ran a rusty nail in his foot a week ago, is still unable to walk, though his physician apprehends no serious results from the wound. Dr. J. E Miller is attending Bodenbeck.

Charles Klepper, a carpenter in the Pennsylvania car shops, had the fleshy part of his right hip badly crushed under a heavy piece of timber yesterday. He was removed to his home, 92 Oliver street, where Dr. George Stemen attended him.

Carpenters' union No. 153 will hold a meeting in A. O. U. W. hall, on Court street, next Saturday evening, to make arrangements for labor day celebration. The union would be pleased to have every carpenter in the city present Saturday night.

Wabash Fleindealer: "The son of the veteran Conductor Godfrey, who for years ran a passenger train on the main line of the Wabash, and who fell and broke his leg one winter night on the station platform in this city, is now agent, operator and lower man at Newton Junction. After the accident his father had to have his injured leg amputated."

George Fox, a brakeman on the Nickel Plate railroad, had his arm crushed at Burr Oak, Ind., last night He was brought to this city and taken to his home, No. 100 Greeley street, where he is attended by Dr. James M. Dinnen, the company's chief surgeon

A recently prepared statement which appeared on Wall street is to the effect that in the last eighteen months 43,000 miles of railroads of this country have been placed under protection of the courts. This is an amount equal to 24 per cent. of the total length of roads in this country.

The old Shufeldt distillery at Chicago closed today, owing to the depression in whisky. Several hundred men are thus thrown out of employment It would appear, from the closing of this distillery, that the large body of bibbers who have so unflinchingly labored for many years in putting down whisky have finally succeeded.

J. C. Talmage, a son of the late General Manager Talmage, of the Wabash railroad, who died in his private car in Peru some years ago, is now a freight brakeman on the Wabash, running between Peru and Montpelier. Mr. Talmage has been in Denver, Col., and came here Saturday. He had scarcely made the application for a position when he was sent out on the road.

The Sentinel unintentionally omitted reference to the Nickel Plate's Niagara Falls excursion, which left here last Monday afternoon and which was the largest excursion party to the falls that was ever gotten up in northern Indiana. The trains started from Valparaiso, in four sections, and when they passed through this city they were fairly well filled. The trip, by way of the Nickel Plate, is a most delightful one, and those who "took it in" will say so when they return.

Captain C. Hettler, the purchasing agent for the Pennsylvania company, is busy nowadays buying lumber for the new cars which are to be built in the Pittsburg shops at this point and of which mention was made in these columns yesterday. The east car shops have a capacity of eight cars per day, but in ordinary times the out-put is usually limited to six cars. The dairy produce cars require more labor and material than any other kind of freight cars and the shops have thirty of these to build, besides the 100 box and 100 furniture cars.

Dr. J. H. Barnfield has tendered his resignation as medical examiner of the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief association, at this point, to take effect September 1, or as soon thereafter as the company has secured some physician to fill the place. Dr. Barnfield will return to Logansport to engage in the practice of medicine and surgery, having formed a partnership with a well known and long established physician of that city. Dr. Barnfield came here to succeed Dr. J. M. Kells, December 1, 1893. He is well up in his profession, is a very social gentleman and his departure from Fort Wayne will be greatly regretted. His successor has not yet been named.

Wabash trainmen coming down from Toledo this morning say that it is reported in that city that ex-Trainmaster C. P. Sisler is lying in a precarious condition at the Boody house in that city. He was stricken with paralysis last night. Mr. Sisler, since his retirement from the position of trainmaster, has been making a tour of the lakes and was soon to take a passengerrun on the road. He is well known in this city and the news of his misfortune will be received with sorrow by his many friends.

A. W. Swanitz, a consulting engineer of prominence, has written a letter to the Journal of Commerce in which he says the railways must very soon begin to buy rails in large quantities. Eleven years is the life of a steel rail, he says, and after that time it must be removed. According to the interstate commerce commission report, there are about nineteen million tons of steel rails in use in the United States, all of which must be renewed every eleven years. This means 1,727,272 tons per annum on an average. Mr. Swanitz says that renewals have contributed largely to reduction of expenses, and that the time has come when contracts for new rails must be made. They cannot be longer postponed with safety.

This afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, funeral services were held over the remains of the late General Passenger Agent Frances Chandler, of the Wabash, at St. Louis. Immediately after the services the remains were placed on a special train and started for Bonne, Mich., where interment will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Nearly all of the officials of the Wabash attended the funeral. Romeo is a small station on the Grand Trunk railway, about thirty miles north of Detroit. The funeral train will come over the main line as far as Peru, where it will take the Fel River route to Detroit and thence the Grand Trunk to Romeo. District Passenger Agent R. G. Thompson went to St. Louis last night to attend the funeral.

A SAD SHOWING.

The World's Tribute to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Highest Honors Awarded by the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893.

World's Fair Medal and Diploma
awarded to
Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

The highest award was given on every claim, comprising superiority in leavening power, keeping properties, purity and excellence. This verdict has been given by the best jury ever assembled for such a purpose, backed by the recommendation of the Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., who made an elaborate examination and test of all the baking powders. This is pre-eminently the highest authority on such matters in America.

This verdict conclusively settles the question and proves that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is superior in every way to any other brand.

NOTE.—The Chief Chemist rejected the Alum baking powders, stating to the World's Fair jury that he considered them unwholesome.

The systematic robbery of freight cars loaded with wheat at Seymour led to the railway detectives taking the matter in hand, and the arrest of a number of small boys, all of whom were committed for trial on confessions of guilt. The storage and sale of several hundred bushels of wheat was traced.

Charles Cowman, a Big Four brakeman, while switching cars at Terre Haute, was alarmed by the cries of Alexander Sharkus, of Fontanet, who attempted to climb between the cars and was caught by the bumpers. Cowman signaled the engineer to release Sharkus, and while recoupling the cars was himself caught and dragged to his death. His home was at Lafayette.

Isaac Fought and Richard Amons, of Clinton, had trouble at one of the mines, in which Fought was the aggressor. Afterwards they met on the streets of Clinton, Fought armed with two revolvers, with which he began shooting. He fired six shots, only one of which struck Amons, passing through his ear. City Marshal Bachelder then armed himself with a bomble-barreled shot gun, and through its influence Fought was locked up.

A snow-white apparition near Frankton first made its appearance to the affrighted vision of McClelland Beagle, of Indianapolis, a track walker in the employ of the Manufacturers' Natural Gas company, and it also floated into view when Beagle was accompanied by James Haggerty. Even the horse which they were driving was alarmed. They watched the apparition until it made the circuit of John Illey's residence and then disappeared in mid air.

Mr. Thomas Batie, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence" 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by druggists.

A FAMOUS HORSE.

Eclipse, Whose Performances Have Been Unsurpassed.

One of the most celebrated of English race horses was Eclipse, who has been described as the king of horses by every historian who has written of that sagacious animal since his time.

Eclipse came into the world amid darkness in daytime, for he was foaled during the great eclipse of the sun in 1764. From this fortunate circumstance he took his name, and not, as is sometimes said, because he eclipsed all rivals. The Duke of Cumberland bred Eclipse, and very early seven expected much a wonder to result from the union of Marsk, a rare horse of the most ordinary pedigree, who in eight years in one stud had produced 91 horses of note, and Spiletta, a mare who had been deemed but little worthy, having run in but one race, in which she was defeated.

The Duke of Cumberland died in 1765, when Eclipse was a yearling, and at the sale of his animals and stud fell also and was sent under the hammer. Marsk went into the hands of a Yorkshire farmer for a trifling sum and Spiletta, after producing at the small charge of half a guinea, a Smithfield salesman, by name William Wildman, who had a penchant for thoroughbreds learned through a groom of the duke's that Eclipse was the property of more than ordinary promise, so he went to the sale and bought him for 75 guineas. He showed so well for his owner that he refused 1,000 guineas for his second half, and offered, when asked to put a price upon him, 2,000 guineas in his dreams. Capt. O'Kelly realized £25,000 from Eclipse's services on the turf, and as he earned something like £700 a time for the use of the lad. The average weight of a horse was greater then than now, the number of pens in the pedigree of the largest pedigree contained the names of but two, the weights of the jockeys were the point of the lead increased with the increased number of pens in the pedigree. With the exception of the first and last runs, the horse had a small cliff removed to the weight of the pens in the same pedigree.

A FAMOUS HORSE.

Eclipse, Whose Performances Have Been Unsurpassed.

One of the most celebrated of English race horses was Eclipse, who has been described as the king of horses by every historian who has written of that sagacious animal since his time.

Eclipse came into the world amid darkness in daytime, for he was foaled during the great eclipse of the sun in 1764. From this fortunate circumstance he took his name, and not, as is sometimes said, because he eclipsed all rivals. The Duke of Cumberland bred Eclipse, and very early seven expected much a wonder to result from the union of Marsk, a rare horse of the most ordinary pedigree, who in eight years in one stud had produced 91 horses of note, and Spiletta, a mare who had been deemed but little worthy, having run in but one race, in which she was defeated.

The Duke of Cumberland died in 1765, when Eclipse was a yearling, and at the sale of his animals and stud fell also and was sent under the hammer. Marsk went into the hands of a Yorkshire farmer for a trifling sum and Spiletta, after producing at the small charge of half a guinea, a Smithfield salesman, by name William Wildman, who had a penchant for thoroughbreds learned through a groom of the duke's that Eclipse was the property of more than ordinary promise, so he went to the sale and bought him for 75 guineas. He showed so well for his owner that he refused 1,000 guineas for his second half, and offered, when asked to put a price upon him, 2,000 guineas in his dreams. Capt. COVERED HEAD & NECK

Eczema of Worst Type. School and Society Abandoned. Felt Death Would be Relief. Cuticura Soon Put An End to all Sufferings.

Two years I was three years old I have been troubled with Eczema of the worst type. It at first developed covered my head and neck. I had all sorts of medicines and physicians and was treated by the leading doctors, but with no favorable success. Sometimes my head was one mass of sores, and the itching and inflammation would be so much, my eyes were so closed as though they would fall off. I was afraid to go to school or mingle with the children much as I did not want them to see me. I felt at times that death would be a relief, suffering and aching all the time. I never was able to be out in the cold. I was so sensitive that almost the slightest touch would cause me to scratch, and I remember that the very pain and trouble I was suffering. We then commenced the Cuticura remedies and I used Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent, and recommended them to whomever I could, and from the terrible disease I was suffering I was cured. I was a source of wonder to all the doctors with whom I consulted. MISS HANNAH BARNES, 320 George St., La Crosse, Wis.

WAS IN CONSTANT AGONY

I have suffered from a severe attack of what is called Eczema. The disease produced an intense burning and itching sensation that kept me in constant agony all the while, so that I got but little rest day or night. I tried several remedies in the two weeks. I thereafter recommend them for your benefit.

Wool from Rabbits.

In parts of France a species of rabbit is cultivated for wool which is said to be softer and finer than that of sheep. The rabbit is combed out at intervals by means of a fine steel comb.

Wool Coloring Power.

Experiments show that cotton can absorb more coloring matter than wool, and that the latter can absorb more than silk. A pound of cotton will take up a greater quantity of coloring matter than a pound of wool.

Of Interest to Mothers.

The success of Miss Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I know of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25c and 50c bottles for sale by druggists.

The Blooming Gel Flower.

There is a wild flower in Turkey that is the most floral image of a thoroughbred. The breast is green, the rings are a deep rose color, the throat yellow, the head and beak almost black.

HARPER'S PICTORIAL HISTORY
—OF THE—
CIVIL WAR.
PART 18. NUMBER 3.
Size of Paper, 11x15½ inches, Number paper, Over 800. Price 10 cents each. Number of Engravings over 1000 and all of the historic battles.
Three coupons of different dates and 10 cents secures each part.

May 18, 1849.

To The Editor:

Volume No. 5 of Harper War Book just came, and it surprised me greatly to find the large colored map. Accept thanks for your promptness. I thought the other parts couldn't be beat, but they seem to grow better. If others appreciate the value of what you are giving for only 10 cents, you must sell a host of them, for if anybody once sees these War Volumes they must be as much surprised as I have been at so much, and so good, for such a low price. You deserve a vote of thanks for what you are doing. The good done by placing this great Harper history of the civil war in reach of every man, woman and child cannot be calculated.

Yours very truly,

INDIANS RESTLESS.

Comanches and Kiowas Troublesome Over Money Matters.

They Slaughter Cattle and Make Life a Burden to the Cowboys and Cattlemen.

EL RENO, O. T., Aug 22.—Reliable information has reached here that the Kiowa and Comanche Indians are becoming alarmingly troublesome because the money to the amount of $90,00 due them by cattle men for lease of their country has not been paid them It has been due them for several months and they are unable to get a dollar. As a result the Indians are assuming a warlike attitude toward the cattlemen and in some sections the disturbing element has destroyed range fences and slaughtered cattle. Serious trouble has also come about by reason of individual demands by certain members of these tribes for their share of back pay. There is much uneasiness among the cattle men and neighboring settlers.

WAIVED EXAMINATION.

Arthur McLean Committed to Jail on the Charge of Murder.

CORYDON, Ind., Aug. 22.—Arthur McLean, charged with the murder of Miss Nettie Douglass, at Henniker, with whom he went riding on the night of August 11, today waived examination, pleaded not guilty, and was committed without bail. McLean still is under his nerve and was not a bit daunted by the crowd that packed the court room almost to suffocation.

THE COURTS.

Hotly Contested Case on Trial Before Justice Hays.

A Replevin Suit Before Justice White in Which Cases Began in the Higher Courts.

Justice Hays has been listening to day to a pretty hardly fought law suit in which the prosecuting attorney appears for the state and Captain Harry Dickman for the defense The case is that of the state against Maggie Nolan, who was arrested last night for keeping a house of ill fame. Captain Dickman is making a vigorous defense for his client and says that if beaten before the justice he will appeal the case to the circuit court.

The replevin case of Delia and William Bishop against Lon Johnson for the possession of a cow, the particulars of which were given a few days ago in The Sentinel, in writing up a criminal case between the parties, was on trial this morning before Justice Wilkinson, but before being finished was continued, by agreement, until one day next week.

Hugh McLetchie and Elizabeth Smith have been licensed to wed.

Charles L Badine, administrator of the estate of Stephen Waters, has filed a petition to sell the estate of the deceased J. B Harper in attorney for the administrator.

At midnight, Constable Skelly raided the Saratoga and arrested three men and three women. They appeared before Justice Hays and put up bail for their appearance at 9 o'clock this morning, when they paid their fines.

Thomas W. Ferguson has brought suit against Mrs Ann Seavey and others for damages, asking for $3,000 His attorneys are B F. Harper and Colerick & Prance The plaintiff was hurt in an elevator accident in the Seavey hardware store July 2, and the claim is set up that the company knew of the bad condition of the elevator.

David Braden sues Joseph Welck and Rudolph Krull, the livery stable owners, for $300 damages Their drivers, Bernard Krull and Joseph Haubach, were racing on Broadway with their horses and carriages on July 25 last, and caused a team of horses driven by the plaintiff to run away, smash his wagon, tear his harness and throw him violently to the ground. A. A. Chapin is his attorney.

The races at Fort Wayne next week, Aug. 27th to Sept 1st, inclusive, will undoubtedly be the greatest meeting ever held in northern Indiana. On Wednesday the program includes the two-year-old pace, with the greatest colt in the world entered, Directly, 2:12, the 2:10 pace, with sixteen entries; the 2:16 trot, with twenty three entries, and the 2:13 trot, with fourteen entries. Sensational time will be made in all of these races. On Thursday the Driving club gives $7,000 in purses and stakes, including the free-for-all pace, with eight horses entered, all with records better than 2:03. On Friday the greatest two light harness horses in the world will appear: Robert J, 2:04¼, in an exhibition against the world's record, and Alix, 2:04¼, in the free for all trot. A new electric car line has been built directly to the grand stand, where passengers will be landed from any part of the city for five cents. Excursion rates on all railroads.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Fort Wayne People as Spoken of by other Papers.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "Mrs. Mayhew and daughter and Miss Bessie McCracken, of Fort Wayne, who have been the guests of Mrs G W Warner and family and Mrs C. P. Greene's family, returned home yesterday."

The Peru Journal says: "Miss Belle Strope, formerly trimmer at Miss Hallie Davis' millinery store, was in the city today on her way from Indianapolis to Fort Wayne"

The Linn, Ohio, Times-Democrat says: "Mrs. W. B Lombota and children, of Fort Wayne, Ind., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Daly, of St John's avenue."

The Huntington Democrat says: "Jacob Lindloch and family, of Fort Wayne, who have been the guests of the Herzog families since Saturday, returned home Monday night.—J. F. Curtice and F. V. Carpenter, of Fort Wayne, were in the city today on business."

The Huntington Herald says: "Miss Georgiana Ford gave a delightful tea last evening in honor of Miss Nellie Beh, of Toledo, Miss Nellie Eby, of Elkhart, and Miss Nina Strock, of Fort Wayne.—John Hartman, of Fort Wayne, who has been visiting the family of Pat McCartney, on State street, went to Peru this morning for a further visit"

The Decatur Democrat says: "Mrs. R. C. Cole, of Fort Wayne, is in the city, the guest of her parents—Miss Rosa Gass left for Fort Wayne today—Miss Maggie Dorwin returned to Fort Wayne this afternoon.—Master Leo Martin returned from Fort Wayne this afternoon.—Miss Nora Hebron returned to her home at Fort Wayne today.—Miss Anna DeWald, of Fort Wayne, is the guest of Miss Mollie Close and Lena Burthell.—Mrs Mollie Fox, of Fort Wayne, is visiting in the city, the guest of Miss Maggie Smith."

ON A BRONCO.

A Newspaper Man Makes a Lark Tour in the City.

Everett McNeel, representing the American Press association, arrived in the city last evening. He is a newspaper man in search of material for articles to [illegible] of the American Press association and will have something to say about Fort Wayne and her early history. He started from his home in Wisconsin on the 23 of July last, riding a broncho, and will make the journey in this manner to New York city. He will leave this evening on his way east.

RUNAWAY LOCATED.

C. S. Armstrong Sends a Telegram to His Wife.

C S Armstrong the young and foolish husband who yesterday shamefully deserted his wife at the Randall hotel, has evidently grown repentant He has been heard from at South Chicago and is evidently ashamed of himself This morning a dispatch was received from Armstrong at South Chicago which read as follows:

"If Mrs C S Armstrong is still there, please tell her to wait I will send her money by wire, if I can."

The dispatch was unnecessary, as the young lady had gone home. She turned over her watch to the hotel last evening and left by the Lake Erie and Western road for her home. Before she left she told a policeman that her husband's jealousy was caused by a boarder at her father's home, and that there was absolutely no occasion for it

This noon Dr. Orwell, the father of the young wife, arrived in the city on a hunt for the runaway husband. He will make things "warm" for the young fellow if he catches him. The girl will be sent to boarding school and a divorce will probably follow.

THOSE BAD EYES.

At police court this morning J. D. Bickford was arrested for putting two black eyes on the person of one Dave Brown. The fight occurred yesterday afternoon, and Officer Hardepolof made the arrest. Brown was fined $1 costs, and Bickford's case was taken under advisement by Mayor Oakley.

WITHOUT A LICENSE.

For some time past a saloonkeeper named Selling has been selling liquor without a city license, on Pioneer avenue, at the extreme south eastern limit of the city. The fellow kept a "first and last chance" place, and the mayor recently notified him to take out a license. This he did not do, and as a result he was this morning placed under arrest. Upon taking out a license and having it dated from last January, the case against him was dismissed.

ON HIS WHEEL.

A few days ago L A Randall, of the Randall Cycle company, was notified by a young man named Ed. Stietzhen, of Lagrange, to look out for a stolen bicycle supposed to have been ridden here. The wheel was described as being a Sterling make, and a good machine. A day or so later Mr Randall saw a well-known young man riding the same wheel about the streets. Investigation disclosed the fact that the wheel had been ridden here and sold to a pawn broker and by him sold to the unfortunate young man for $30. The wheel was retrieved and sent back to Lagrange.

Mr. Randall has the reports of nine different wheels stolen in the northern part of the state within the past few weeks.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY

Conclusive Evidence of the Plottings of Anarchists.

Anarchs, Germany, France and England Have Anarchists Who Communicate With Each Other.

BERLIN, Aug 22—It is stated that among the belongings of the fourteen anarchists who were arrested in this city on the 15th inst were a number of documents which show conclusively that the Berlin plotters were in constant communication with their brethren in Paris, Barcelona, Chicago and London. Evidence was also found that financial aid had been received from the anarchists in the cities named by their companions in Berlin. Anonymous letters threatening Emperor William's life are frequently received at the imperial palace, and all possible precautions have been adopted to prevent the carrying of the threats into execution.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Strike Commissioners Hear Some of Pullman's Men Talk.

Rents are Not Too High in That Suburb," Says Frank Glover, a Real Estate Dealer.

CHICAGO, Aug 22—Several of the witnesses examined by the strike commission today gave testimony more favorable to the Pullman company than that which had previously been heard. Frank W Glover, a real estate agent, said he considered the Pullman houses, at $18 and $20 a month really cheaper than $12 a month houses in surrounding towns. The Pullman houses were well equipped and beautifully located, he said, and rents were not, in his opinion, too high In reply to a query of Commissioner Wright, Mr. Glover denied that he was in any way connected with the Pullman company.

Paul F Berms, a newspaper who formerly worked in Pullman shops, said he did not place much faith in the complaints of the men. Their trouble, he thought, was largely due to a fondness for beer. All the saloonkeepers in the surrounding towns had grown rich, Mr. Berms declared, and a large number of Kensington beer wagons were well supported by the Pullman employes Of real estate values he knew little, but did not believe that Pullman rents were unusually high. T. H. Johnson, a Pullman furniture dealer, testified that store rents in the town had been cut, though no reduction had been made in the residence rentals

CHICAGO, Aug 22—Further proceedings in the quo warranto case affecting the Pullman company's charter which were to have been begun today, were continued owing to the absence from the city of Attorney General Maloney. It is probable that no further action will be taken for several weeks. The Pullman strikers and their families were greatly encouraged today, the visit of Governor Altgeld to their homes having led them to believe that they will receive immediate aid. The relief headquarters, which have been closed for a week, were reopened today in expectation of returns from the governor's proclamation and a few supplies were received.

Governor Altgeld returned to Springfield last night, leaving the strikers in the dark as to his future plans for their relief. A committee from the board of county commissioners visited Pullman today and investigated the condition of the families with a view to voting money for their relief. Gen. M. Pullman flatly refused to be interviewed regarding Governor Altgeld's visit and declared he would not discuss the strike in any of its phases.

YOUNG MEN OF TODAY

THEIR OPPORTUNITIES FOR ACHIEVING SUCCESS IN LIFE

Opinions of Men Whose Names Are Widely Known. Some Who Think They Have as Good a Chance as They Ever Had. Contrary and Other.

[Copyright, 1896, by Frank G. Carpenter.]

New York, Aug. 21.—Whenever I have had the opportunity of late men have been in the morning of their school opinions were worth publishing on such a subject I have turned the current of talk to the discussion of these allied questions: "Have the young men of today as good an opportunity to win success as they had in the past, say a score of years ago?" and "Is it advisable for the farmer's son who is bright and clever and pushing to leave the ancestral acres and start out for himself in some great city?"

A Boilermaker's View.

Not all to whom I have put the questions were men whom names are widely known. One was a policeman whose beat is along the south side of Union square. He is an American, and from his appearance was a country boy. I took him for a recent New Yorker and asked him if I was right.

"Yes, you see," he said. "I'm from Herkimer county. My father had a farm up there and has it yet. He's an old man now, but he's the most contented man I know of. His farm was paid for 20 years ago. I helped pay for it by working on it till I was 21. Then I got gay and came to town."

"You wish now that you hadn't?" I queried.

"Yes, I do. Of course I've got a job that I won't lose as long as I behave myself, no matter how hard the times are. But suppose I'd stuck on the farm with my father and been content with the country. Why, say, he lives like a king up there. He has his horses and carriages; he is independent as a man can be; he's town's clerk and no account of somebody by his neighbors. He has to work hard in the summer, but in the winter he takes it easy. I'm saving my money, and some day I'm going back there and have a farm of my own. They may say all they want to about farming not paying. It's good enough for me. The farmer doesn't have so much money maybe as the city man, but he doesn't have to spend so much either. He doesn't have a chance to do such big things, and so he finds fault sometimes, but he forgets or never knew that risks in town are a hundred times greater than they are on the farm. Young men have as good a chance, too, I think, as they ever did. I had a better chance than my father did, but I wasn't willing to work as hard as he did to benefit by it."

Rev. Robert Collyer In Sangaline.

White haired Dr. Collyer, famous as a pulpit orator alike in Chicago and New York, was the next man to whom I put my queries.

"The present is hardly the time," he replied, "to ask these questions. But when the hard times have passed away, and they are but temporary, I believe the young man of today who is in earnest and sincere and willing to work will have a much better opportunity to make his way in the world than had the young men of 30 years ago. The young men of today, even though his opportunities for schooling were limited, is a much better trained young man than his father was before him. I know it is often urged that there are fewer opportunities now for young men to go into business in a small way and win moderate successes, because of the concentration of so many lines of business in the hands of, comparatively speaking, a few large corporations. But this condition does not affect what I have said. The young man of ability and earnestness can make his way in connection with the corporations. They are hungering for men of capacity, young men who are able to do their work, and very often they are quite unable to get them. They are willing to pay any price for the right men. This talk that the appeal of golden opportunities for young men has passed is nonsense."

Rev. Dr. Hall's Belief.

Rev. Dr. John Hall, like Dr. Collyer, believes that young men have as good a chance now as they ever had. "Perhaps the strongest cry that the young man has no chance nowadays," he said, "comes from the country. It is a mistaken cry. The farmer's son of today cannot get away from the farm quick enough to suit him. He hurries to the city, there to join the ever increasing competition with other farmer's sons for a livelihood. The city cares already congested and are daily receiving recruits from abroad. The competition becomes too fierce, and the farmer's son who might have lived in useful, well ordered and sane life in the country falls by the wayside. I am more familiar with the city country and its conditions in some respects than with this, and I know of farms that have been abandoned there, the men who should have worked them having left to seek their fortunes in London or in America, while at the same time London receives a large proportion of its supply of butter and eggs from France and Belgium. If the people of these countries can produce these supplies at a profit for the London market, why cannot English men in England farms? In America, as I need repeat it, young men are leaving farms because they cannot get on to suit themselves as farmers, and Germans are taking their places and supplying the markets of the cities with vegetables and milk and cream and fruits and butter and eggs. The difficulty is that the farmer's son wants to get to town. He thinks his hours of work will be short and the rewards will be glittering. He is not willing to get on in the morning as Cincinnati in the Cincinnati and work all day. He does not realize that the

THAT ELECTRIC BELL

MR. BOWSER THINKS HE KNOWS ALL ABOUT IT.

But When He Attempts to Monkey With the Complicated Machinery the Result Is Somewhat Disastrous and Bowser Re-tires With Blood in His Eye.

[Copyright, 1896, by Frank L. Stanton.]

"Say, Bowser, is the electric bell up-stairs working?" inquired Mrs. Bowser of the other evening after looking up your name in the directory.

"I don't know. Can't tell. I suppose so," grunted Mr. Bowser in reply as he looked up from his paper.

"I have discovered it is liable to get out of order somewhere in the line."

"No, nothing of the sort. Ours is the only doorbell in this town which is ever going out of order. It's a wonder to me that people don't have to have double the bells in running up here every day in the year. I've been two years—"

"It hasn't been out of order for a year before."

"I don't it! That shows how little you know about it. It is going on all the time. You may count a hundred times that doorbell has had to be repaired in the last 12 months. That lower button is a month-ly occurrence. I'll bet you $5 to a dime I can make it go now."

"What is the use of your trying? You demanded Mrs. Bowser as she rushed into the hall.

"Make that young man stop his infernal noise, and you go back and sit down!" he replied in reply as he galloped down stairs after a hammer, a screwdriver, a pair of pincers and a whetstone.

Mrs. Bowser heard him pounding and rushing about for five minutes. Then he came to the sliding and pounded and rushed some more. The cook flew into the back yard and screamed "Fire!" and "Police!" and young Bowser tried so hard to drown the noise of the bells that his eyes rolled, and he exhibited every symptom of flu. Mr. Bowser finally found the wires as they led in from the front door and cut them off and pulled them out by the roots, and the ringing ceased. Then he sat down on the front steps. He rose there when the frightened child finally grew quiet and Mrs. Bowser went out to see if the hurricane had passed.

"What did the bells, and the emperor, and the alternating currents get pitched up?" she kindly asked.

Mr. Bowser looked up and glared and breathed as if he had been climbing up a hayrick. Then he said nothing to her. There was no need of words. She was to blame, of course, and in the morning his lawyer and her lawyer would have an interview and arrange for a divorce and settle the amount of alimony.

A WHITE MAN'S LETTER.

How It Was Changed to Conform With Existing Circumstances.

At 7 sat in the hotel reading room, close to a window, opening out on a veranda, a colored man sipped at the window and looked on me that I. I did him it he wanted anything of me. He looked at me a moment, and then moved one step nearer and then stopped.

"I see you have a letter to be sent where," he said. "Do you write a letter what was to come to me back to me?"

"You have been sent letters to me back before, my man?"

"Yes, sah."

"And could you write one to me back?"

"Yes, sah, I could write to me back."

"Then I'll give you a letter to write to me back."

I wrote the letter. It was a very short letter, and I gave it to the man.

"Now, you write to me back what I've written to you."

"I could, sah. If you'll only wants me to write to me back what you've written to me back I'll do it, sah."

"And you would write to me back in your own words?"

"Yes, sah, I could write to me back in my own words."

"Then I'll give you $1 if you write to me back what I've written to you."

"I could, sah. If you'll only wants me to write to me back what you've written to me back I'll do it, sah."

I repeated the above words into his ear. He grinned a great deal and said he could write to me back. I gave him a piece of paper and a pencil and left him.

Peculiarly Phrased.

I had not been more than a couple of hours in the office when one of the compositors brought me a letter. It was addressed to me, and was in the following words:

"Mist. Times, sah, of the paper—the paper what you're to me back—I'm to me back to you to me back to say that I'm to me back at the office to me back, sah, and I'm to me back to you to me back to say that I'm to me back to you to me back to me back to me back

"AN ONLY SON."

Rev. Dr. Talmage On the Miracle at the City of Nain.

An Apt Illustration of Christ's Sympathetic Nature, Which Went Forth to All Whose He Found in Distress.

Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow, and much people of the city was with her.—And who after Lord was her He had compassion on her, and said unto her, "Weep not." And He came and touched the bier, and they that bare him stood still. And He said, "Young man, I say unto thee, arise." And he that was dead sat up and began to speak. And He delivered him to his mother.—Luke vii., 12-15.

The text calls us to stand at the gate of the city of Nain. The streets are rank with business and gayety, and the ear is deafened with the hammers of mechanism and the wheels of traffic. Work, with its thousand arms and thousand eyes and thousand feet, fills all the street, when suddenly the crowd parts, and a funeral passes by. Between the wheels of work and pleasure there comes a long procession of mourning people. Who is it? A trifler says: "Oh, it's nothing but a funeral. It may have come up from the hospital of the city, or the almshouse, or some low place of the town. But not so says the serious observer. There are many evidences of dire bereavement that we know at the first glance some one has been taken away greatly beloved; and to one inquiry: "Who is this that is carried out with so many offices of kindness and affection?" the reply comes: "The only son of his mother, and she a widow." Stand back and let the procession pass out! Hush all the voices of mirth and pleasure! Let every head be uncovered! Weep with the weeping procession; and let it be told through all the market places and bazars of Nain, that in Galilee, beyond the sepulcher both gathered to Rest "the only son of his mother, and she a widow."

There are two or three things that, in my mind, give especial pathos to this scene. The first is, he was a young man that was being carried out. To the aged, death becomes beautiful. The old man hatts and pants along the road, where once he bounded like the roe. From the midst of immedicable ailments and sorrows he cries out: "How long, oh Lord, how long?" Footsore on the last journey, he wants to get home. He sits in the corner, and sings, with a tremulous voice, some tune he sang forty yearsago, and longs to join the better assemblage of one hundred and forty and four thousand, and the thousands of thousand who have passed the flood. How sweetly he sings the last song! Dash back the white locks from the wrinkled temples; they will never ache again. Fold the hands over the still heart; they will never hold again. Close gently the eyes; they will never weep again.

But this man that I am speaking of was a young man. He was just putting on the armor of life, and he was exulting to think how his sturdy blows would ring out above the clamor of the battle. I suppose he had a young man's hopes, a young man's ambitions, and a young man's courage. He said: "If I live many years, I will feel the hunger and clothe the naked. In this city of Nain, where there are so many bad young men, I will be sober and honest, and pure, and magnanimous, and my mother shall never be ashamed of me." But all those prospects are blasted in a few hours. There he passes lifeless in the procession. Behold all that is left on earth of the high-hearted young man of the city of Nain.

There is another thing that adds very much to this scene, and that is, he was an only son. However large the family flocking by, we never would think of sparing one of the lambs. Though they may all have their faults, they all have their excellences that commend them to the parental heart; and if it were peremptorily demanded of you to-day that you should yield up one of your children out of a large family, you would be confounded, and you could not make a selection. But this was an only son, around whom gathered all the parental expectations. How much care in his education! How much caution in watching his inding ways! How many days of anxiety in other times. He would have entire control of the family property long after the parents had gone to their last reward. He would stand in society a thinker, a worker, a philanthropist, a Christian. No, no. It is all ended. Behold him dead. Death is gone. Life is extinct. The only son of his mother.

There was one other thing that added to the pathos of this scene, and that was, his mother was a widow. The main hope of that home had been broken, and now no wave come up to be the staff. The chief light of the household had been extinguished, and this was the only light left. I suppose she often said, looking at him: "There are only two of us." Oh, it is a grand thing to see a young man step out in life and say to his mother: "Don't be downhearted. I will, as soon as possible, take father's place, and as long as I live you shall never want anything." It is not always that way. Sometimes the young people get tired of the old people They say they are queer, that they have so many ailments; and they sometimes wish them out of the way. A young man and his wife sat at the table, their little son on the floor playing beneath the table. The old father was very old, and his hook shook so, they said: "You shall no more sit with us at the table." And so they put a little bench in the corner, where day by day he ate out of an earthern bowl everything put into that bowl. One day his hand trembled so much he dropped it and it broke; and the son, seated at the elegant table in middle-age said to his wife, "Now, wife dear, I will get you a bowl, and that he can't break." So a wooden bowl was obtained, and every day old grandfather ate out of that sitting in the corner One day, while the elegant young man and his wife were seated at their table, with elbows upon and all the comforts of life, their little son sat upon the floor, they saw the lad whittling, and they said, "My son, what are you doing there with that knife?" "Oh, said he, "I'm making a trough for my father and mother to eat out of when they are old."

But this young man of the text was not of that character. He did not belong to that school. I can tell it from the way they mourned over Him. He was to be the companion of his mother. He was to be his mother's protector. He would return not some of the kind words he had received on the day of childhood and boyhood. Ah, he could not be his strong breadwinner that soon already referred to his age. Will he do it? No. In one hour all that promise of help and companionship is gone. There is no staff of support to lean on. Lost plank. The only son of his mother, and she a widow.

Now, my friends, it was upon this scene that Christ broke. He came in without any introduction. He stopped the procession. He had only two utterances to make; the one to the mourning mother, the other to the dead. He cried out to the mourning one. "Weep not," and then, touching the bier on which the son lay, he cried out: Young man, I say unto thee, arise!" And he that was dead sat up.

I learn two of three things from this subject, and, first, that Christ was a man. You see how that surrounded and upon all the chords of his heart. I think we forget this too often. Christ was a man more certainly than you are, for He was a perfect man. No sailor ever slept in ships hammock more soundly than Christ slept in that boat on Genesaret. In every nerve and muscle, and bone, and fiber of His body; in every emotion and affection of His heart; in every action and decision of His mind, He was a man. He looked off upon the sea just as you look off upon the waters He went into Matthew's house just as you go into a cottage. He breathed when He was tired just as you do when you are exhausted. He felt tired after sleeping out a night in the storm, just like you do when you have been exposed to tempest. It was just as much nothing for Him to lay bread as it would be for you to lay a piece of newspaper. He felt just as much insulted by being sold for thirty pieces of silver as you would be if you were sold for the price of a dog. From the crown of the head to the sole of the foot He was a man When the thorns were pressed for His brow, they hurt Him just as much as they would hurt your brow if they were twisted for it. He took not on Him the nature of angles; He took on Him the seed of Abraham. "Here home"—Behold the man!

But I must also draw from this subject that Christ was a sympathizer. Mark you, this was a city funeral. In the country, when the bells toll, they know all about it for five miles around, and they know what was the matter with the man, how old he was, and what were his last experiences. They know with what temporal prospects he has left his family. There is no hush, there is no solemnity in the countryside. There is nothing done as a mere matter of business Even the children come out as the procession passes, and look sympathetic, and the tree shadows seem to deepen, and the brooks weep in sympathy as the procession goes by. But, then, this was a city funeral. In spite of was a city funeral. In spite of the flash of fire-gre I hold it in the stopping of the death's shakels; I see it in the face of the rising slumberer; I hear in the outcry of all those who were spectators of the scene. "If, when I see my Lord Jesus Christ mourning with the bereaved, I put my hand on His shoulder, and say, "Why weepest Thou?" and I hear Him proclaim supernatural deliverances, Hook up into His face and say with Thomas: "My Lord and my God." Do you not think He was a God? A great many people do not believe that, and they compromise the matter, or they think they compromise it. They say He was a very good man, but He was not a God. That is impossible. He was either a God or a wretch, and I will prove it. If a man professes to be that which he is not, what is he? He is a liar, and hypocrite, to hypocrite. That is your unanimous verdict. Now Christ professed to be a God. He said over and over again He was a God, took the attributes of a God, and assumed the works and offices of a God. Then you now say He was not? He was a God, or He was the worst lie.

Do you think that I can not prove by this Bible that He was a God? If you do not believe this Bible, of course there is no need of my talking to you. There is no common data from which to start. Suppose you do believe it? Then I can demonstrate that He was Divine. I can prove He was Creator. John i, 3: "All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made." He was eternal, Rev. xxii, 13: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." I can prove that He was omniscient. John v, 10, "The heavens are the work of Thine hands." I can prove He was omnisicent. John ii, 24: "He knew what was in man." Oh, yes, he is a God. He cleft the sea. He upheaved the crystalline walls along which the Israelites marched. He planted the mountains. He raised up governments and cast down thrones, and marches across nations and across worlds and across the universe, eternal, omnipotent, omniscient, and unabused. That hand that was nailed to the cross holds the reins of bleash of fore. That head that dropped on the bosom in fainting and death shall make the world quake at its nod. That voice that groaned in the last pang shall swear before the trembling world that time shall be no longer. Oh, that lovely Jesus, who consumes one of the race by telling us that this person was only a man, in whose presence the paralytic arm was thrust out well, and the devils crouched, and the lepers dropped their scales, and the tempests folded their wings, and the boy's satchel of a few loaves made a banquet for five thousand, and the sad procession of my text broke up in congratulation and hosanna!

Again, I learn
